High Court Decides Not To Consider 5 Race Cases

Segregation Ban At Maryland U. Retained by Move; Taylor Loses Fight

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Supreme Court yesterday stuck by its unanimous ban on graduate school segregation and refused to consider four other racial cases.

These were the related rulings on the first decision day of the 1950-51 term:

1. Refused to reconsider its decision of last June 5 that the University of Texas must admit a Negro student, Heman Marion Sweatt, to its hitherto all-white law school. Sweatt was admitted after the decision but Texas asked for a rehearing. This was the request denied yesterday.

2. Refused to consider Senator Glen H. Taylor's appeal from a 1948 disorderly conduct conviction on a charge he entered a Birmingham, Ala., church by a Negro entrance. The Idaho Democrat was campaigning on the Progressive ticket for vice president at the time. To avoid jail, Taylor will have to stay out of Alabama from now on.

3. Refused to consider Maryland University's appeal from a Maryland Court of Appeals decision ordering it to admit a Negro girl, Esther McCready, to the School of Nursing. The constitutionality of the 13-State southern regional compact, by which Negroes are sent to out-of-State Negro colleges, remains undetermined.

4. Refused to review a case involving restrictive real estate covenants in Oklahoma City, Okla. The case, which goes back to 1944, involved several Negroes seeking a Federal restraining order against action in the State courts to set aside sale of property to them by whites who earlier had agreed not to sell to Negroes. The lower Federal courts had refused to take the case on the grounds that no constitutional issue had been raised when the case was in the State courts.

5. Refused to consider the case of an Atlanta Negro school teacher protesting against different salary scales for Negro and white teachers in that city. The lower courts held that the teacher had not exhausted his right of appeal to the State Board of Education.

In refusing to consider the cases listed, the Supreme Court yesterday gave no reasons. Many

Boy, 4, Killed In Fall From Moving Auto

RAYMOND G. MITCHELL, JR.
. . . Dies at Alexandria Hospital

A 4-year-old boy plunged to his death from the back seat of a moving automobile yesterday in the 2700 block of Jefferson Davis hwy., Alexandria.

The child, Raymond G. Mitchell, jr., died of head injuries at 4:25 p. m., soon after he was admitted to Alexandria Hospital.

The car was driven by the boy's aunt, Mrs. Robert T. Mitchell. He was sitting on the rear seat with his mother, Mrs. Thelma Mitchell; his sister, Beverley, 8, and his cousin, Mrs. Robert Mitchell's son, William C. Mitchell, 18 months.

Grabbed Handle Instead

The mother later said she believed her son was trying to roll down the window but by mistake grabbed the door handle and fell out.

The car, police said, was going approximately 25 miles an hour. George Moore, a cab driver following directly behind the Mitchell car, told police he saw the door fly open and the child plunge out. Moore who lives at 109 S. Patrick st., Alexandria, called an ambulance.

Police learned Mrs. Thelma Mitchell was holding her 18-month-old nephew on her lap at the time and speculated that this might have handicapped her in reaching for her son.

Had Been to School

Shortly before the accident, the sisters-in-law had stopped at George Mason Elementary School to pick up Beverley and Mrs. Robert Mitchell's two school-age children. The latter two children were in the front seat with their mother. The mothers were headed for a cleaning establishment to pick up some clothing.

The father of the dead boy, Raymond G. Mitchell, is a former District policeman now employed as a driver by the Alexandria Dairy. The two Mitchell families share a home at 708 W. Braddock rd., Alexandria.

One Patuxent River Naval Air station sailor was killed and another injured when an automobile overturned yesterday afternoon on Route 235, near Hollywood, in St. Marys County, Maryland State Police reported.

Roval Francis Smith, 20, who suffered a skull fracture, was killed. Injured was George K. Yocher, 21, who was admitted to the station hospital with possible spine injuries.

The automobile overturned when it failed to make a right hand curve.

The driver, Richard L. Loope, 20, also of the Naval Air Station, was uninjured. No charges were placed immediately, police said.

Ambassador Talks

NEW YORK, Oct. 9 (U.P.).—William O'Dwyer denied tonight that he quit as Mayor of New York City because he had been tipped off that the police graft-gambling investigation would blow wide open.

"There is no truth in that suggestion," he said. "When I left the city I had no notion or knowledge regarding the disclosures since in connection with the police department."

The former mayor, back in town for the first time since he resigned to become U. S. Ambassador to Mexico, admitted, however, that he wasn't very surprised by corruption in the police department.

"It's not news to anybody who's lived 40 years in this city," he said. "The history of the city is such that every so often culprits are found; the question is now to get the evidence. There's always gambling. As for the grafters, you could machine-gun them for my money."

O'Dwyer said he had not been asked to appear before the Brooklyn grand jury investigating gambling. But he added that he would be in New York and Washington for the next month, straightening out his affairs before going to Mexico, and would be "available" to the grand jury.

The former mayor admitted it was unfortunate that he had called the gambling probe, which turned up information that the police force netted as much as five million dollars a year in graft from gamblers, a "witch hunt."

He said he made the remark during a period of "emotional" stress.

"There never was a time when I didn't support the investigation," he said. "An investigation of this kind is always useful to an honest administration and mine was an honest administration."

O'Dwyer said he thought the city's new Police Commissioner, Thomas Murphy, was a "good man" but said he would have retained former Police Commissioner O'Brien "unless someone had shown me why not."

He urged that gambling be legalized to take care of the "millions of decent people who want to bet."

Controversial 14th St. Light To Be Turned Off

Starting about noon today, the most publicized traffic light in the District—the one at 14th and D sts. sw.—will be turned off for between 30 and 60 days, and perhaps much longer.

The light was ordered doused by the District Commissioners yesterday on recommendation of Traffic Director George E. Keneipp, who explained his engineers should make a third study of the Mall area "in view of the unusual discussion the signal has aroused."

Judge Waring Home Pelted; FBI Called

Residence of Critic Of Segregation Hit In South Carolina

CHARLESTON, S. C., Oct. 9 (AP).—The home of Federal Judge and Mrs. J. Waties Waring, both severe critics of segregation of Negroes, was pelted tonight "with missiles of an undetermined nature."

FBI agents, called to the home by Waring, declined comment.

City police detectives who arrived on the scene shortly after the incident said the house had been hit by two brickbats.

Judge Waring said a pane in a window in the front of the house was smashed "perhaps by a bullet" and the front screen door "slashed and battered."

"You can expect this sort of thing in South Carolina," the Judge said. "It's a State dominated by the Klan—a crime committing Klan that goes unpunished.

"Whatever it was that smashed the window sounded like an explosive," he said. "The FBI men are searching the house now to see if they can find one or more bullets. I won't say they were bullets, but something certainly sounded like explosives."

Asked if the attack might force him to change his residence the judge exploded:

"Certainly not. My wife and I are staying right here. You can bet on that."

Judge Waring said the attack followed a number of "mysterious telephone calls received the last few days."

Waring was widely criticized in 1947 when he handed down a ruling that permitted Negroes to participate in the Democratic primary in South Carolina.

More Yanks Push Across Korean Line

Cavalrymen Meet Stiffened Resistance; Advance of More Than Mile Reported

By Bill Ross

TOKYO (Tuesday), Oct. 10 (AP).—An Army spokesman said South Korean troops seized Wonsan's airfield today and were fighting in the streets of the Red Korean east coast port.

Reports to United States Eighth Army headquarters in Korea at the same time indicated the entire United States First Cavalry Division had pushed across the Communist border into North Korea near the west coast. There was no official confirmation, however.

The two drives followed General MacArthur's second and "last time" demand yesterday that North Korean Communist lay down their arms.

An American spokesman for the Korean Military Advisory group (KMAG) said the South Korean troops seized Wonsan airfield at 4 a. m. (2 p. m., EST, Monday). He said they pushed on into the port city by 9 a. m. (7 p. m., EST, Monday) and were clearing the streets of Reds.

Red Supply Train Seized

Three other South Korean divisions were across the Red border between the Americans on the west coast and Republican forces on the east. One, the South Korean Capital Division, reported the capture of a loaded supply train carrying 5000 Russian-made rifles, 500 machine guns and other war booty.

The American cavalrymen pushed over the thirty-eighth parallel north of Kaesong. They had advanced more than a mile against stiffening Red resistance and were about 83 miles south of a major U. N. objective, Pyongyang, the North Korean capital.

At Wonsan, the charging South Koreans captured 1000 Red prisoners.

Earlier KMAG reports said the South Koreans beat down Red resistance a mile south of Wonsan before entering the port city.

Port Is Major Prize

Wonsan, a fine deep-water port with unlimited anchorage, was a major prize for which the Reds had made a bitter stand. It is 95 air miles east of the North Korean capital at Pyongyang, across the narrow waist of the peninsula.

All along a new 120-mile front in Red Korea—ranging from 1 mile north of the thirty-eighth parallel on the western end to 90 miles deep on the east coast—Korean Communists were fighting back stronger and with more determination than in many days.

Nevertheless, some 45,000 United Nations troops on the front hammered out gains, overwhelming and outflanking the Red defenders in tactics the North Koreans once employed effectively themselves when they first invaded South Korea 15 weeks ago.

Four South Korean divisions and some 5000 United States First Cavalry troopers were north of the thirty-eighth parallel—in a

Indo-Chinese Trap Snaps on French Force

Battalions in Retreat Caught Near Fortress Haven; All Feared Lost

SAIGON, Indo-China, Oct. 9 (AP).—The Viet Minh snapped a trap on several battalions of French troops northwest of Thatkhe, near the China border, today and the French suffered a defeat of disaster proportions.

The encirclement caught the French garrison withdrawing from abandoned Caobang. The French force was outnumbered ten to one. A French military spokesman said the troops caught included some of the finest of France's Foreign Legion and Moroccan troops.

The Viet Minh forces in North Indo-China have been steadily growing in both numbers and fire power. Official reports say more than 20,000 Viet Minh soldiers have been trained and equipped in basis within Communist China.

Up to now the French, meeting intensifying action elsewhere in Indo-China, have just been able to keep their border garrisons sufficiently strong to balance the Viet Minh units.

The safety of the French post at Thatkhe lay almost in sight of the withdrawing garrison from Caobang when the Communist battalions swarmed from the mountains. There were heavy losses counted on both sides, but there was little likelihood any French survivors could fight their way out.

French military sources said today's engagement may be shown to be the largest military action involving Viet Minh units in the five-year-old war.

Peace Plan Nod of Soviet Startles U. N.

Vishinsky Agrees To Several Sections Of U. S. Proposal

Address by Truman

PRESIDENT to make policy talk to U. N. Assembly. Page 2.

Dulles Quotes Stalin

LAKE SUCCESS, Oct. 9 (NYHT).—Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky surprised the United Nations today by announcing that he would agree to "some parts" of Secretary of State Dean Acheson's plan for strengthening U. N. machinery against aggression, although he would have "amendments or corrections" on some other points.

Vishinsky's statement came immediately after John Foster Dulles, American delegate, outlined a proposal sponsored by the United States and six other delegations.

The Acheson plan calls for: 1. Convening the Assembly on 24 hours' notice in emergencies, instead of the present 15-day limit; 2. Creation of a small-power observation commission available to report on facts by on-the-spot investigations with the consent of the country visited; 3. Maintenance of national armed forces ready for U. N. call; 4. Establishment of a committee to study other collective defense measures.

Vishinsky's speech occasioned additional surprise because when Acheson first set forth his proposal in the Assembly, September 19, Vishinsky said the Soviet Union would not take the path on to which Acheson wished to lead the Assembly—a path which Vishinsky said "has nothing in common with the road toward peace."

Agreement Expected

Indications were that the Soviet bloc might agree to speeding up the convening of the Assembly, although arguing against notice as short as 24 hours because of travel difficulties.. Also indicated was agreement on a general fact-finding body with some restrictions.

The view in Western delegations was that the Soviet Union had found itself at a tactical disadvantage in its preference role as a campaigner for peace, since a specific Western proposal was now before all 60 member nations and would be acted upon before Vishinsky's familiar plan for a Big

Moscow Says Jets Strafed 60 Mi. Above North Korea

Gromyko Reports Incident Occurred Oct. 8, Demands Strict Punishment

MOSCOW (Tuesday), Oct. 10 (U.P.).—The Soviet government protested to the United States today that two American fighter planes had "grossly violated" the Russian frontier and strafed a Soviet airport 60 miles north of the Korean border.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko delivered the protest to United States Minister-Counselor Walworth Barbour in Moscow on October 9 after reading it verbally.

Moscow said two F-80 Shooting Stars in a hedge-hopping attack across the Soviet border from Korea on October 8 attacked a Soviet airport on the seacoast about 60 miles above the frontier and roughly 40 miles below Vladivostok.

Russia called it a "resolute protest" and demanded the strict punishment of persons guilty of the "provocative" act. It demanded assurances that the United States will take necessary measures to prevent such actions in the future.

The Soviet said Barbour refused to accept the protest.

"Mr. Barbour declared that on this question it was allegedly necessary to deal with the United Nations organization inasmuch as in the area of Korea the United Nations Armed Forces were acting. On this protest Mr. Barbour refused to accept the note," Moscow said.

Gromyko pointed out the "absolute groundlessness of Mr. Barbour's arguments inasmuch as the subject of the note of the Soviet government was the firing on a Soviet aerodrome by airplanes of the United States Air Force and not by some other airplanes," Moscow said.

The Soviet protest followed a series of Chinese Communist protests that American planes had violated Chinese territory by crossing the Yalu River boundary into Manchuria.

The text of the Soviet note:

"The government of the U. S. S. R. deems it necessary to state the following to the Government of the United States:

"On Oct. 8 at 16 hours, 17 minutes (4:17 P. M.), local time, two fighter planes of the U. S. A. Air Force of the type Shooting Star (F-80) grossly violated the state frontier of the U. S. S. R. and, approaching in a hedge-hopping flight the Soviet aerodrome situated on the sea cost in the Sukhaya Rechka area, 100 kilometers (about 62 miles) from the Soviet-Korean frontier, fired at the aerodrome from machineguns.

"As a result of the firing, damage was inflicted on aerodrome equipment.

"In connection with these provocative actions of the American Air Force, expressed in a gross violation of the U. S. S. R. state frontier by American military airplanes and in firing on a Soviet aerodrome, the Soviet government lodges a resolute protest with the Government of the United States.

"The Soviet government insists on strict punishment of the persons responsible for the attack on the Soviet aerodrome and expects from the United States Government assurance that it will take the necessary measures to prevent such provocative actions in the future.

"The Soviet government considers it necessary to state that the responsibility for the consequences of such actions on the part of the U. S. Air Force falls entirely on the Government of the United States of America."

Folger Follows Bard's Request: 'Report Me 'n' My Cause Aright'

Hamlet, Act V, Scene II

By Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporter

Do not worry over the fortunes of the Folger Shakespeare Library these rude days.

The library has its troubles—such as a comic edition of Macbeth sullying its stacks, and an offer to sell out, and some character who inscribes his initials on statues. But the library is getting along fine—just fine.

This is to be gathered from the latest "report from the Folger Library," an irregularly issued and mimeographed publication which comments on the affairs and fortunes of the library.

Concerning that comic book, as an example, the report stymatizes it as "one of the most discouraging pieces of Shakespeariana we have seen . . . It sells for 10 cents, and anyone with eyesight enough to discern pictures in color and sufficient learning to spell out simple captions can understand it."

In fairness, the report quoted from the publisher's blurb, as follows: "Here, finally, is a so-called 'comic' you can be proud of. Ask your teachers, ask your parents if they think you should read Shakespeare. Sabatini or great stories like Beau Geste and Scarlet Pimpernel.'"

To which blurb the report replieth: "Well, children go ask your teachers and parents. We haven't got the gall."

Folger, as everybody knows who is anybody in the world of bibliography and Shakespeare, is devoted to bibliography and Shakespeare. It is at 201 E. Capitol st., although its trustees are the trustees of Amherst College, some distance away.

As a depository of Shakespeariana and literature of The Master's day, it receives many visitors concerned with bibliography and Shakespeare—and other matters.

"A tabulation of the preceding year's work," the report said, "shows Folger aided more readers than ever in its history. A total of 350 readers found material here . . .

"In addition to university professors and other academic research students," the report continued to crow, "the readers included professional writers, actors,

In Wake of Earthquakes

656-Ft. Tidal Wave Reported Battering Island of Amboina

JAKARTA, Indonesia, Oct. 9 (AP).—A great tidal wave battered the island of Amboina last night in the wake of a series of violent earthquakes.

A broadcast from the island, center of a bloody rebellion against the government of Indonesia, reported casualties and appealed for Red Cross help.

The tidal wave, the broadcast said, reached a height of 200 meters. (This would be 656 feet and seems improbable. Seismic waves as high as 90 feet are big enough to spread enormous destruction over a wide area.)

Damage was reported great in coastal villages such as Galala and Halong. The broadcast gave no figures on dead or injured, but there were fears here that the toll was heavy.

The island, heart of the South Moluccan rebellion against Indonesia, is 32 miles long and has an area of 386 square miles. Its population is about 240,000. The Amboinese district includes the islands of Amboina, Saparua, Boeroe, Ceram and the Banda Isles. These islands lie between Dutch New Guinea and the Island of Celebes.

Dispatches from Poona, India, yesterday reported seismograph recordings of earthquakes in the general area of the Moluccas, with the epicenter near Timor Island, about 400 miles southwest of Amboina.

The East Indies suffer frequently from earthquakes, volcanic eruptions and attendant atmospheric disturbances, and tidal waves. One of the most disastrous was the violent eruption on the volcanic Island of Krakatos in 1883. This caused a tidal wave in which some 36,000 persons were reported to have perished.

Tractor Overturns, Alexandrian Badly Injured

A 24-year-old Alexandria farmhand was in undetermined condition at Arlington Hospital last night after the tractor he drove overturned and crushed him against a nearby truck.

Two other farm hands had to work with crowbars to free the victim, William Tarman of Route 2, Alexandria.

The accident occured on the dairy farm of W. L. Clark at Bailey's Crosroads, as Tarman drove the tractor down a rain-slick hill to pull out a mired truck. The tractor slipped, overturned, and pinned the worker against the truck.

Tarman, rushed to the hospital by Clark, suffered a crushed chest, abdomen, and spinal injuries.

He Ate Too Many Eggs, She Says

Wife Whips Crippled Husband And Baby; Jailed for 10 Days

A 30-year-old Kensington, Md., woman yesterday drew a 10-day jail sentence because she whipped her 57-year-old crippled husband with a switch.

She is Mrs. Lula May Sexton. Trial Magistrate James R. Miller imposed the sentence on an assault and battery charge because he said he saw no difference between a husband assaulting a wife and a wife assaulting an invalid husband.

The husband, Norrell Sexton, completely paralyzed on his right side, said his wife beat him after he objected to her using the switch on their 19-month-old baby.

He said she struck him repeatedly in the face with the switch, which he said was 3/8th of an inch in diameter. He said she also stepped on his right foot, and struck him in the face with her fist.

In addition, Sexton testified, his wife pulled his hair in what he called an attempt to bang his head against a radiator. He said his wife previously had beaten him with a broom handle, and used it on their two children.

Mrs. Sexton admitted to Judge Miller that she had the switch in her hand. She said she had been using it to "chastise" her 19-month-old baby. She also admitted that she had used the switch on her husband.

She said their argument started because her husband had eaten more eggs than he should have. The eggs reportedly were prepared by a son of Sexton's by another marriage.

Mrs. Kathryn J. Lawlor, attorney for Mrs. Sexton, filed an appeal in the case and Mrs. Sexton was freed on $200 bond.

First Yank to Cross Line Is First to Die

3 Wounded

2 Marines From D. C. Die in Korea

Pfc. Liverette — Pfc. Caudle

Lieut. Warren Taylor — S/Sergt. Herbert Taylor

Two District Marines — a career officer and a member of a Marine Corps family — died in the Korean fighting recently, it was reported yesterday.

Pfc. Robertson

Another Marine and two Army men from the area were wounded in action.

Marine Pfc. William L. Robertson, 22, listed as "dead of wounds" on Department of Defense Casualty List No. 19, is one of three brothers who have served in the Corps. His 27-year-old brother, Pvt. James P. Robertson, who reenlisted three weeks ago, is now at his home, 2148 O st. nw., on a short leave from Cherry Point, N. C. Another brother, John L. Roberts 3d, 28, is a former sergeant who saw service in the Asiatic-Pacific theater in World War II. He now lives in Los Angeles, Calif.

Marine For Two Years

In the Marine Corps for two years, Robertson left Camp Pendleton for Korea in July, with the Fifth Regiment, First Marine Division. His mother, Mrs. Mary A. Robertson, who moved to the O st. address from Baltimore a year ago, is a correspondence clerk with the State Department Diplomatic Mail and Courier Branch.

Second Lieutenant Warren Herbert Taylor, 25, who wanted to make the Marines his life work, was killed in action on September 25, his widow, Mrs. Jeannette B. Taylor, of 1416 14th st. nw., was informed by telegram Sunday. The former George Washington University student leaves a 5-month old daughter, Janice Diane. Taylor was a native of Fort Worth, Tex., where his mother, three sisters and two brothers are living.

In his last letter home, dated September 14, he said he was heading a mortar section.

Killed a Lieut. General

Washington Marine Pfc. Robert W. Liverette, 18, who wrote home that the first North Korean he "got was a lieut. general," received a gunshot wound in his right hand. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Winslow K. Liverette of 1308 Spring rd. nw., received a telegram October 3 that his condition was serious. A former student at Bell Vocational High School, he enlisted January 18, 1950, and was sent overseas to Kobe in July.

From Kim Airfield the day after it was captured he wrote his mother that "the company got a few compliments from General MacArthur after we knocked out six tanks and 100 men."

Two days ago, Mrs. Edward Caudle of Route 3, Herndon, Va., talked to her son, Army Pfc. James E. Caudle, 19, in Fitzsimmons Hospital in Denver, Colo. After being on the battle front for 59 days, he was wounded eight miles from Taegu with mortar fragments in his chest, arms, hips and legs, he told his mother.

Caudle was transferred from a hospital in Japan to Hawaii before being flown to Colorado. He is one of seven children.

Aboard Hospital Ship

Army Staff Sergt. Herbert Taylor is on a hospital ship and probably headed for home, according to word received by his mother, Gladys Reese Taylor of 504 3d st. nw. She also learned that her 24-year-old son had been awarded a Silver Star for gallantry in action.

Taylor was commanding the leading vehicle of a motorized patrol ordered to penetrate into enemy territory to obtain intelligence data, the citation account of the award received by Mrs. Taylor stated. The patrol was a unit of the Twenty-fifth Infantry Division.

Sergt. Taylor's vehicle received a "burst of fire and rolled off the road" down an embankment. Seriously injured, the sergeant, drove on in another vehicle toward the enemy and "delivered withering fire on hostile forces with a machine gun mounted on the vehicle."

A nine-year veteran of the Army, Taylor enlisted at 15. He has a slight limp, a holdover from an injury received in Europe in World War II.

A brother, Millard D., 21, is serving with the First Marine Division in Korea. Another brother, Gene, 20, served with the Marines in World War II.

WITH FIFTH CAVALRY REGIMENT North of Thirty-eighth Parallel, Oct. 9 (NYHT).—The first American to die in North Korea was the first to cross the parallel. He wa sa young lieutenant who last night led a patrol across the parallel ine and prepared the way for today's crossing.

The lieutenant's death was the only fatality in brief fighting that preceded the capture of the tiny village of Topdong. The village was still in flames when the Second Battalion took it over this morning to establish there the first American command post in North Korea.

Orders for the predawn assault reached battalion headquarters near Changdong late last evening. Company commanders were called in from field positions for conferences by lantern light in a blackout tent.

Gradualy in the deep darkness vehicles and units started forming up. In the confusion of night it seemed miraculous that the convoys ever got on the road at all.

Shortly after dawn a reconnaissance team reached a small white bridge just at the thirty-eighth parallel. The bridge was on a secondary road going northward to the Red capital Pyongyang via the city of Majoni.

Suddenly some one in the lead shouted "look out, this bridge is wired for something."

The group braked to a halt. It turned out that the bridge had been wired but the enemy in his haste had departed without bothering to blow it up. The dynamite lay by the road. There were other signs that the enemy did not expect to put up much of a fight in this area. On the slopes of ridges to the rear were strings of pillboxes and trenches. They were all empty. It seemed too lucky to be true.

Ahead of the bridge about 1000 yards down the road the tiny village of Topdong stood out.

The reconnaissance unit spread forward. Suddenly from the ridge machine guns crackled. Everybody jumped out. The unit's machine gun squads started pounding back at the ridge line. Suddenly there was silence.

It was only a temporary lull. The machine guns on the hill were saving their fire for "Fox Company" moving single file down the road behind the reconnaissance team.

It was these machine guns that got the young lieutenant as he was leading his riflemen toward the ridge through the village of Topdong. His riflemen finished the job for him.

Rights Group Officer Calls U. S. 'Criminal'

PRAGUE, Oct. 9 (AP).—William Patterson, national executive secretary of the American Civil Rights Congress, today called the United States Government a "criminal Government." He said armed resistance on the part of American Negroes against Ku Klux Klanism might increase.

Patterson, who is touring Eastern Europe, gave his views at a news conference. The gray-haired Negro said:

"American imperialism is on a war drive which cannot stop because of its fear of economic collapse." He added that America was threatening the world with the atom and hydrogen bombs, and then went on:

"It is a very great pleasure for me to see the eastern (Communist) republics preparing for any eventuality."

[Reliable Prague sources said at least six members of Czechoslovakia's world champion ice hockey team have been sentenced to prison terms of from 6 to 15 years on charges of "slandering the republic," planning to flee the country and assaulting SNB (state police) men, the United Press reported.]

Gen. Church Is Decorated for Gallantry

TOKYO, Oct. 9 (AP).—Maj. John H. Church, commanding general of the Twenty-fourth Infantry Division, has been awarded the first Bronze Oak Leaf Cluster to the Silver Star for gallantry during the Naktong River crossing September 19.

The general headquarters announcement today said:

"General Church, with utter disregard for his own life, went to the Naktong crossing site encouraging his men and reorganizing them to speed the operation. His personal direction immeasurably aided the successful crossing and set an inspiring example to his men, encouraging them to greater effort."

He was awarded the Oak Leaf Cluster to the Legion of Merit for his services with the general headquarters advanced echelon. His other decorations include the Distinguished Service Cross, Silver Star and Purple Heart with two clusters.

General Dean Honored

FORT MEADE, Md., Oct. 9 (AP). The United States Armed Forces in Korean Association, at its annual meeting here Saturday, set up a scholarship fund in honor of Maj. Gen. William F. Dean, "missing" since the withdrawal in the first Taejon fighting.

Those benefiting will be sons and daughters of Americans killed in Korea, and Koreans themselves.

The action was praised by the convention speaker, Dr. John Myun Chang, South Korean Ambassador to the United States.

150,000 Are Inoculated At Seoul by U. N. Team

TOKYO, Oct. 9 (AP).—Wartorn Seoul's 150,000th citizen was inoculated today by the medical group attached to the vast United Nations relief project in devastated South Korea.

Headed by Brig. Gen. Crawford Sams, the U. N. relief team includes medical corpsmen from Denmark, the United States, Britain, Peru, Canada and the Netherlands. They were recruited through the World Health Organization and the International Refugee Organization.

Sams is chief of General MacArthur's health section.

In addition to medical care the U. N. relief program provides 375 tons of rice daily to Seoul's residents. The rice is contributed by Thailand and the Philippines.

Marines Don't Notice Flying Into Power Line

TOKYO, Oct. 9 (U.P.).—Marine First Lieut. Bruce Vernon of Chico, Calif., a Corsair pilot, always wondered what it would be like to fly through a power line.

When he did he didn't notice it, a general headquarters release said today.

Vernon hit a 350-foot high electric line strung across the Han River as he and Capt. B. E. Perkins of Los Angeles flew into the early morning sun.

Bruce's plane shuddered but seemed to handle all right so he and Perkins continued on their mission.

On their way back the fliers saw four high tension wires dangling down. When Bruce got back he found gashes in the plane's right wing, the tail and the engine cowling.

Truman to Deliver Policy Talk to U. N.

President Truman will make a "full-dress" speech on foreign policy before the United Nations General Assembly on October 24, it was announced at the White House yesterday.

It was announced at the same time that he will fly to St. Louis, Wednesday, to see his sister, Miss Mary Jane Truman, installed as grand matron of the Order of the Eastern Star of Missouri.

Mr. Truman received an invitation from United Nations officials on October 7, but didn't accept it until yesterday afternoon. How he will travel to New York, whether by train or airplane, has yet to be decided.

He will address a plenary session of the General Assembly in Flushing Meadows, the occasion being the fifth anniversary of the day when the United Nations came into being as a working organization.

Formal, Full Dress Speech

White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross told the reporters that Mr. Truman would make "a formal, full-dress speech" when he faces the world's statesmen.

Ross said that the President was going to St Louis tomorrow for the "sole purpose" of seeing his sister installed as grand matron of the Order of the Eastern Star, which is the women's branch of Masonry.

Mr. Truman will leave here in his airplane, the Independence, at 3:30 o'clock on a flight that is scheduled to put him in St. Louis 2 hours and 45 minutes later. After witnessing the installation of Miss Truman as grand matron, which will take place in Kiel Auditorium, he will spend the night at the Hotel Jefferson.

Back to Capital in Evening

On Thursday, the President will attend a luncheon in honor of Miss Truman and the other newly installed officers at the Sheraton Hotel. Thereafter, he will start back to Washington, planning to arrive here at 6:30 p. m.

Conditional

Stepinac Has Freedom Bid, Report Says

LONDON, Oct. 9 (AP).—A leftist former member of the British Parliament said today the Yugoslav government is ready to release Archbishop Alojzijc Stepinac at once if the Vatican will remove the prelate from that country.

Konni Zilliacus, expelled by the British Labor Party in 1949 for opposition to its policies, has just spent two months in Yugoslavia, three weeks of it with Premier Marshal Tito at Bled. He talked with most Yugoslav leaders.

Zilliacus told reporters that "if the Vatican is not already aware" of Yugoslavia's position as regards Stepinac, "it would be an easy matter to check it through the Papal Nuncio in Belgrade."

(A Vatican source said today the Vatican is not interested in a conditional release of Stepinac. The Archbishop long ago refused an offer of freedom upon condition that he leave the country, Vatican sources said).

Stepinac, accused of collaborating with the Nazis during World War II and of subsequent anti-state activities, was sentenced in 1946 to 16 years in prison. Zilliacus said the Belgrade government insists that Stepinac leave the country if released because he would automatically become Archbishop of Zagreb and Primate of Yugoslavia again if he remained.

Both the United States and Britain have been pressing the Belgrade government to free the Archbishop. An American note to Belgrade last fall said Yugoslav relations with the West would be improved by such an act.

Vishinsky Backs Peace Plan

Five peace pact could come up again.

Besides the seven sponsoring powers—Canada, France, the Philippines, Turkey, the United Kingdom, Uruguay and the United States—the Acheson Plan received general support today from Chile, Belgium and Greece.

Dulles Quotes Stalin

Opening debate, Dulles mentioned Soviet Premier Stalin to back up his argument. "In the present state of international affairs," Dulles said, "there is the same need for assured collective resistance to aggression that Marshal Stalin called for in March, 1939"—a reference to a Stalin speech to the Soviet Communist Party's eighteenth congress that year.

Marshal Stalin, Dulles recalled, then said that "the nonaggressive states, primarily England, France and the United States, had rejected the policy of collective security, the policy of collective resistance to the aggressors, and have taken up a position of non-intervention, a policy of 'neutrality.' Actually speaking, the policy of nonintervention means conniving at aggression, giving free rein to war, and consequently transforming the war into a world war."

Dulles said the Stalin warning went unheeded, and "six months later the series of little wars did, in fact, culminate in World War II." And today, Mr. Dulles said, the Korean conflict has shown that the peoples of the world are in a mood to develop "collective resistance to the aggressors," and to correct "organizational weaknesses" of the U.N.

Dulles argued that the Assembly must be prepared to act with its powers of recommendation when the Security Council fails. The Assembly's very readiness, he held, might induce the Council to work more effectively. The "peace observation" commission, ready to look into points of tension, he said, would fulfill Marshal Stalin's 1939 view of the League of Nations as "a place where aggressors can be exposed" and which "might hinder the outbreak of war."

Vishinsky then proposed that the Political Committee skip general debate on the whole resolution, and work instead on the four main points "with a view to having them fully clarified and with a view to reaching the maximum measure of common agreement."

He said this method would "escape the danger of drowning in generalities and general speeches which would be rather unproductive."

Other delegates insisted on a general discussion in which all nations could offer proposals. Vishinsky's proposal was voted down, 48-5, with three abstentions, after he made one last cryptic comment:

"There is no reason to believe that I am in favor of the general tendency shown in the United States proposal, except for the fact that it deals with the strengthening of peace.

"I cannot agree with a large number of the practical proposals which it includes. This is not a question of having a general debate in which all of us would vie in our declarations in favor of peace. On the contrary, we should vie in adopting practical proposals which would actually serve to strengthen peace—which we all purport to serve."

Military Prisoners Reported in Battle

NYHT News Service

Army officials yesterday inclined to support a story brought back from Korea by wounded American soldiers that "hundreds" of military prisoners in Japan had their sentences "forgiven" by Gen. Douglas MacArthur and were thrown into the conflict during its most crucial period.

Allies Fight Way Into Wonsan

push designed ultimately to converge on the North Korean capital of Pyongyang if the Reds refuse to surrender.

The enemy knew that at least 10 other United Nations divisions were poised within the shadow of the old demarcation line to back up General MacArthur's final surrender demand.

That ultimatum—the second by the U. N. military commander—came Monday. In demanding anew that the enemy quit the war, MacArthur asked for surrender now so that the decisions of the United Nations to unify and restore Korea can be carried out with a minimum further loss of life and destruction of property.

The broadcast message was directed to the Premier of the North Korean Red regime. It promised that the North Koreans will be justly treated if they lay down their arms. It asked them to cooperate in setting up an independent and unified government for their country of 30 million persons.

"Unless immediate response is made by you in the name of the North Korean government, I shall at once proceed to take such military action as may be necessary," General MacArthur said.

In the 10 days since the first surrender demand was made, the bulk of the U. N. striking force in Korea has been regrouping—awaiting the word to mount a win-the-war offensive.

The only Allied troops so far across the thirty-eighth parallel are the four Republic of Korea divisions—the Third, Sixth, Eighth and the Capital—and part of the American First Cavalry Division.

The United States troopers went north Monday morning after sending patrols across Sunday from captured Kaesong. The battle-tested foot cavalrymen went over the parallel without much opposition but hit sharp resistance about a mile north of the marker.

Associated Press Correspondent William J. Waugh said the Americans were forced to dig in because of mortar, small arms and automatic weapons fire from ridge positions on three sides of the road.

Lieut. Col. William Walton of Newton, Kans., estimated the enemy force at only 100 to 1000. Their commanding positions in well-fortified hills made it easy for a comparatively small force to stall the advance.

Walton, who made an aerial reconnaisance flight over the area, said the enemy has prepared positions about 25 miles deep along the road the Americans must take to reach Pyongyang.

"I don't mean that there were troops in each position," he told correspondent Waugh, "but you can never tell, the way these guys burrow in."

Fighters and bombers gave the Americans strong aerial support.

It was at the eastern end of the Allied line that the U. N. forces had made their deepest penetration of Communist Korea—and were meeting the strongest resistance at the moment.

The South Korean Third Division plunged within one mile of Wonsan, key Red east coast supply center, before sundown Monday.

Associated Press Correspondent William Jorden said the Third might be able to fight its way into the city before dawn but it would be tough going. In Monday's advance the Republicans ran into a large-scale artillery bombardment and heavy mortar and small arms fire.

"The Reds were doing everything in their power to slow the advancing South Koreans," Jorden said in a late dispatch Monday night.

The South Korean divisions drove on Wonsan in three columns with the main force following the coastal road on the east. A second column was on the left flank. The third column was moving from the south in a curving prong from the little town of Ambyon.

The Reds did everything in their power to slow the advancing Republicans. They blew bridges whenever they had time to place charges. They planted mines along every road.

South Korean engineers found mines along the roadside after their First Infantry and vehicles passed over them.

The Communists also were blasting roads, usually in mountain areas where quick by-passes were difficult, Correspondent Jorden said. The Republican engineers with ample volunteer labor from noncombatant North Koreans—repaired the damage almost as fast as the Reds inflicted it.

The North Koreans blew up bridges over two main rivers east of Wonsan—the Namdai and Hokudai, and knocked out a smaller bridge at the village of Wolpo.

Wonsan, noted as one of the few points where anti-aircraft fire could be expected, lived up to its reputation Monday afternoon. As flights of mustangs roared over key targets, bursts of flak could be seen from high ground east of the city.

A headquarters spokesman said the places to watch were around Wonsan and along the road to Pyongyang. Prisoners repeatedly have said the Reds intend to make a major stand at Wonsan. Despite the fact that U. N. Republican forces were last reported within a mile of the city, they still had to cross one more ridge.

Fifth Air Force pilots said at dusk Monday that patrols had entered Wonsan, but later ground reports did not confirm this.

Cavalry Faces Toughest Fight

Perhaps the toughest Communist stand was expected in the face of the First Cavalry thrust, however. A spokesman for General MacArthur reported that the enemy appears to have assembled an organized division in the center of the peninsula between Hwachon and Kaesong. It probably was units of this outfit that slowed the United States advance.

It was a foregone conclusion that the Communists would throw up their major defense before the capital itself, but where or when was as obscure as where or when the United Nations would launch their major all-out attack to end the 3½ month-old war.

There was mounting speculation that the massive Allied assault would come soon, now that General MacArthur had issued his final surrender-or-else demand.

Poor communications shrouded movements of the South Korean Sixth, Eighth and Capital divisions.

The Capital division, 21 miles north of the thirty-eighth parallel, captured seven Russian-built tanks loaded on flatcars headed north.

A spokesman at General MacArthur's headquarters said the Reds were concentrating around Hwachon, 7 miles north of the thirty-eighth and about 50 miles inland from the east coast of Hwachon itself and was in South Korean hands.

Both the Sixth and Eighth South Korean divisions had elements in this sector and fought off a Red attempt to re-take the city Sunday.

South of the thirty-eighth, Red holdouts launched a number of vicious but uncoordinated attacks at widely separated points.

Some 1500 Reds were beaten back into the hills after a bitter action Sunday. In the Taejon area the Reds made four attacks at Kunsong, Poun, Okchon and Kumdong over the weekend. A total of 1452 prisoners were taken in this area alone. All told, 4531 Reds surrendered Sunday to bring the bag of prisoners to more than 55,000.

Bad flying weather and the lack of extensive activity on the ground fronts gave a breather to much of the Air Force. Fighter-bombers ranged out to support ground troops where asked for and when possible, however, and B-29s pummeled communications and other facilities north of the battle areas.

Red Troops, Rails, Buildings Hammered by Allied Planes

TOKYO, Oct. 9 (AP).—American planes hammered at Red troops, installations and communications today in support of widely separated United Nations army drives north of parallel thirty-eight.

Fifth Air Force F-80 jet Shooting Stars and F-51 Mustangs rocketed and strafed Red troops north of Kaesong, where the United States First Cavalry Division pushed ahead into Red territory.

Pilots said some Cavalry units waved off assigned air support in some sectors north of Kaesong.

The fighter pilots then swung to the east coast in support of South Korean Third Division troops driving into Wonsan. No enemy air opposition was reported.

About 30 B-29s ranged 120 miles between the thirty-eighth and fortieth parallels, blasting bridges, marshaling yards, highways and rail lines. Pilots reported excellent results in good weather.

B-26s were out in force again today, concentrating their attacks on the Wonsan area.

A B-26 flight hit the east coast rail line from Yonghung to Kowon, cutting the tracks in three places. Fifteen box cars were stafed and left in flames, according to Maj. Dan E. Seal, Dallas.

Other B-26 flights struck a marshaling yard at Sinpung, just east of Yonghung, and rail concentration point five miles southwest of Hamhung.

Fifth Air Force pilots flew 170 sorties, 105 of them in close support of U. N. troops. They said 25 trucks, 13 vehicles, 20 troop buildings and nine railway tank cars were destroyed, and 31 box cars, one tank, four trucks, five vehicles and nine troops buildings damaged.

British Face Cuts To Meet Arms Needs

By The Associated Press

Some informed American officials believe Britain's Labor government may have to cut back popular activities like public housing and roadbuilding to finance rearmament.

British funds budgeted for jobs of that kind, they said, may have to be diverted to tanks, guns and other war supplies.

These officials, not quotable by name, noted that the United States already has cut back its multi-million dollar road building plans and soon will propose curbs on private home construction to save strategic materials and help curb inflation.

It was emphasized that the United States has no intention of dictating to the British where they should find the funds to finance their scheduled $9,520,000,000 three-year program.

The United States at present also has no intention of putting up enough dollars to finance rearmament without British belt-tightening.

British officials themselves are reported convinced further sacrifices will be necessary. But until the over-all military production picture is available they cannot be expected to decide where economies should be effected.

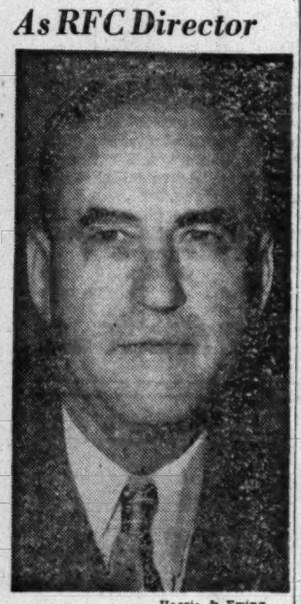

The State Department, realizing the delicacy of such decisions, plans to leave the matter strictly up to Britain. As long as Britain comes up with the money needed for its share of rearmament, the United States will be satisfied.

These views were made known as Hugh Gaitskell, British Minister of Economic Affairs, started a round of talks with top American officials.

Gaitskell conferred with Treasury Secretary Snyder on general financial problems. Earlier he had talked with World Bank President Eugene Black and Camille Gutt, director of the International Monetary Fund which regulates world money values.

Gaitskell had said emphatically on arriving in New York Sunday that Britain has no intention of boosting the value of the pound from its present rate of $2.80 as a means of picking up extra money.

IRO Director Asks Extended Life for Agency

GENEVA, Switzerland, Oct. 9 (AP).—J. Donald Kingsley, director general of the International Refugee Organization, reported today that "unpredictable obstacles" made impossible the completion of the organization's work by next March 31, as scheduled.

Kingsley's annual report to the IRO council said the delay resulted chiefly from unexpected difficulties in the acceptance of refugees by the United States and Australia.

The director recommended that IRO's life be prolonged beyond March 31 to permit resettlement of all refugees originally scheduled for transfer to the United States and Australia and to enable the organization to aid additional refugees now applying to go to the United States.

He said 25,600 fewer refugees than expected went to the United States during the first six months of 1950 and 10,600 fewer were accepted for Australia.

Buddy System Integrates South Koreans, 'Bobo,' 'Casey' et al Into U. S. Army Units

TOKYO, Oct. 9 (AP).—Bobo, Moe, Casey and Alabam are doing all right for themselves under the United States Army's buddy system in the Korean fighting.

They are four of thousands of South Korean volunteers who have been integrated into American army units.

Names were perhaps the biggest stumbling block when the program began last July. Veteran American sergeants found their South Korean units overflowing with Kims' and Lees—the Smiths and Joneses of Korea.

A paint brush and a little imagination cleared up the situation in a hurry. On each South Korean's helmet was painted an official nickname assigned by his American buddy.

The system was introduced in the United States Seventh Infantry division, where South Koreans were first integrated into the American army.

As soon as each Korean completes his brief basic training, he is assigned to a squad and to a specific buddy. He stays with the Doughboy, copying his every move.

The system has helped overcome problems of language, food, clothing and customs. The South Koreans and Americans have developed a unique vocabulary of pidgin English, plus a smattering of Japanese words.

Instead of their usual rice diet, the South Koreans are eating American rations. And they are issued beer, cigarettes and candy bars on the same basis as their buddies.

They even have learned to swivel their hips to get the necessary extra inches out of their short legs to keep stride with the Doughboys.

The South Koreans have impressed Americans with their skill in handling rifles. Lieut. Charles Bailey, Birmingham, Ala., said all in his outfit could take apart and assemble the rifles perfectly after one day of training. They like to shoot so much, their instructors have a hard time keeping them from sneaking back to the firing range.

The Americans no longer call them Gooks. The South Koreans are referred to as "ROKS," adopted from the abbreviation for the Republic of Korea.

One U. S. sergeant explained the change this way:

"How in heck can you call a guy a foreigner when he's shared your foxhole, split your shift on guard and helped you fight off a night attack?"

German Catholics Riot Over 'Visitation' Ban

HEROLDSBACH, Germany, Oct. 9 (U.P.).—Three thousand persons rioted today in defiance of a Catholic church ban which forbade persons to assemble on the spot where a year ago school children claimed they saw visions of the Virgin Mary.

The ban was issued by the Bishop of Bamberg who labeled the visions "unreal and unfounded" because they were reported by the children shortly after a showing of the American film, "Song of Bernadette."

Greeks Claim Bulgars' Dam Threat to Isle

ATHENS, Greece, Oct. 9 (U.P.) Greek military authorities today charged that the Bulgarians were trying to divert the flow of the Evros (Maritsa) River in an attempt to claim the Greek river island of Alpha.

They claimed the Bulgarians were building a dam to shift the river flow and thus bring the island within the Bulgarian half of the Evros.

They said the dam was certain to result in floods, destroy the fertile soil of neighboring plains and thwart flood-control projects now being studied by a Greco-Turkish committee.

Crime Is 'Bipartisan,' Kefauver Declares

As Investigator

Martin Fay Joins Crime Probe Staff

Martin F. Fay, special investigator for the Senate District wire-tapping probe committee, has been appointed to the investigation staff of the Nation-wide Kefauver Crime Committee.

Chairman Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) said Fay, a Boston attorney, will investigate gambling and allied activities in Philadelphia.

Fay was named to the wire-tap committee in the absence of the regular committee counsel, Gerhard Van Arkel, who recently returned from a month's trip to Europe.

Kefauver said it is unlikely his committee will probe District criminal activities.

The committee, already conducting probes in Kansas City, New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and other large cities, is due to expire February 28, said Kefauver, adding that at present he does not plan to ask for an extension.

Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.) yesterday discounted the effect of disclosures by his Crime Investigating Committee on current election campaigns. Underworld politics are "bipartisan," he said.

Kefauver told newsmen that some criminals are Republicans and some are Democrats, and they "play both sides of the street" in attempting to wield influence.

As chairman of a special Senate committee set up to investigate interstate crime and its "corrupting" influences, Kefauver has just completed three days of closed hearings in Chicago.

Earlier, he held hearings in Kansas City, and on Wednesday he will start two days of closed sessions in New York City or Newark, N. J.

Some Republican Senators have said that GOP candidates in the November elections stand to gain from what they called the tie-up between crime and politics revealed by the Chicago and Kansas City hearings and the police graft scandal in New York City.

Crime Worse Outside Chicago

Kefauver said he thought from his committee's hearings that "law enforcement is worse in Cook County, outside of Chicago, than it is in Chicago." He noted that the county is under Republican control, while Chicago has a Democratic administration.

Kefauver also:

1. Disclosed that the Senate crime committee has had investigators at work in Cleveland, Ohio.

2. Announced that the committee's Philadelphia hearings have been delayed for reasons which he said he was unable to discuss. The hearings had been planned for this week.

3. Said the hearings in New York City or Newark will deal with gambling transactions but are not related to the Brooklyn grand jury's investigation of bookie payoffs to city police.

Kefauver said that Joe Adonis, a reputed gambling kingpin who is among those under subpena, has not yet been found by committee investigators so far as he knows.

Police Captains Called By Committee Agents

CHICAGO, Oct. 9 (U.P.).—Investigators for the Senate Crime Committee began an inquiry today into the income of Chicago police captains, some of whom are reported to be living in luxury.

Col. George White, chief investigator for the committee here, called in Capt. Joseph Goldberg, who owns a ranch near Phoenix, Ariz.

Harrison, Goldberg and Capt. Louis Klatzco all have been subpenaed by the committee. White said if they fail to answer questions about their income satisfactorily, the committee will ask to see their income tax returns.

The Senate Committee at its three-day session here last week was informed that some police captains live in fine homes, drive expensive cars, wear $200 suits and fly their own planes.

White said the committee is satisfied with an income report turned in voluntarily by Police Commissioner John C. Prendergast.

O'Dwyer Sorry For Expression

Edward Corsi, Republican candidate for Mayor, called O'Dwyer's suggestion for legalized bookmaking "as offensive now as when he first made it last January, when he was preparing to slide out of City Hall."

What Brought Him Back?

Corsi added, in part, a statement:

"What the people must be asking themselves, as I ask myself, is what brought the fugitive back here? Did a voice in Washington suggest that it would be discourteous to a friendly nation, such as Mexico, to send there an official who was under fire and who was running away from his post?"

O'Dwyer defended his regime as Mayor only two days before the scheduled arrival of Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) and his Senate Crime Investigation Committee.

The Senate crime probers planned to move into the big city for two days of secret hearings on the New York underworld and its alleged links with the Chicago Capone syndicate.

Meanwhile, there were these developments today in the city's ever-widening gambling probe:

1. Frank Erickson's younger brother, Leonard, and two cohorts were arrested on 30 gambling charges and charged with handling bets of nearly $100,000 between May, 1949 and May, 1950. Frank Erickson, the Nation's kingpin bookie now serving a two-year jail sentence for gambling, said he paid his brother $20,000 a year for his services as an "accountant."

Detectives are Demoted

2. Police Commissioner Thomas Murphy received a report on the detective division from Chief of Detectives Conrad Rothengast and demoted four men and took away extra pay from a fifth. He did not reveal his reasons.

3. Brooklyn Judge Samuel Leibowitz ordered Patrolman Michael Reardon to start serving a 30-day sentence for contempt of the grand jury investigating gambling and pay a $250 fine or serve another 30 days. Reardon refused to tell the grand jury the names of police officers who attended a house-warming party given by Gross, head of a twenty million dollars a year bookmaking ring who allegedly paid police one million dollars a year for protection.

4. Gross' wife, Lila, obtained a writ of habeas corpus, returnable Tuesday, in an effort to get her husband out of jail.

Gross is held in lieu of $250,000 as a material witness and is considered the key man in the entire gambling probe.

Truman Sends Chiang Anniversary Message

President Truman sent "good wishes" yesterday to Chinese Nationalist Generalisimo Chiang Kai-shek.

The occasion was the anniversary of the Wuhan revolution which resulted in establishment of the Republic of China. Mr. Truman's message was strictly formal, and was phrased in familiar diplomatic language.

Russian Zone Police Comb Election Area

BERLIN, Oct. 9 (AP).—East Germany's Communist police tonight laced the Soviet zone with security patrols in preparation for elections in the East German People's Republic Sunday.

Police squads were reported on the move, seizing suspected anti-Communists to prevent any propaganda drive that might detract from the one-ticket elections.

The ballots were being printed in strict secrecy. A single list of National Front candidates, nearly three fourths of them Communists, will be handed the East-Zone voter. Anybody who votes "no" will be blacklisted by election officials. Unmarked ballots will be counted as affirmative votes.

But while East German police cracked down hard on the East zone, more than a quarter-million East Berliners showed their opposition to Communist rule.

In answer to an invitation by West Berlin anti-Communists, more than 250,000 have mailed their September ration cards, with names removed, to the West Berlin city hall. Each ration card is counted in West Berlin as a "no" to Communist rule.

The cards continue d to come in today despite a warning from the official Russian newspaper, Taebliche Rundschau, that if East Berliners did not keep their ration cards they would lose a new ration of low-priced clothing soon.

East Berlin will not be allowed to vote Sunday because of four-power agreement in 1945. But the Communists have ordered East Berlin workers to volunteer a workday Sunday to show they are lined up with the National Front.

Berlin Mayor Predicts Reds Will Quit Germany

BERLIN, Oct. 9 (NYHT).—Mayor Ernst Reuther today predicted in an interview that the Soviet Union would eventually withdraw its troops from Germany and Austria.

He said the time would come when the West must unite in telling the Russians they must pull out their occupation army. Some face-saving device would be necessary, he added, but he was convinced they would go peacefully and that a war would not be necessary to end the division of Germany.

Austrian Pianist Is Freed As 'Risk' Under Security Law

NEW YORK, Oct. 9 (U.P.).—A 20-year-old Austrian pianist who was forced under Nazi law to join the Hitler youth movement at the age of 10, was permitted today to enter the United States for six days for a concert engagement.

GULDA

The youth, Friedrich Gulda, had been held on Ellis Island for more than 48 hours under the Nation's new internal security act, which bars admission of anyone who has ever been a member of, or "affiliated" with, a Communist, Nazi or Fascist party.

The same law had threatened for a time to bar the return to his home here of Arturo Toscanini, the world's most renowned conductor, who arrives from Europe Tuesday. But immigration department officials in Washington quickly issued a statement saying the 83-year-old musician would be allowed to re-enter this country, thereby avoiding a certain storm of protest from artistic circles.

In Washington, Attorney General J. Howard McGrath announced he was using his "discretionary" power in permitting Gulda to enter this country for his American debut at Carnegie Hall Wednesday night. But the youth will have to leave the United States on Saturday, which will cause cancellation of his scheduled concert in Boston on October 19.

Gulda told reporters he had never attended Hitler youth meetings or taken part in the organization's parades.

Despite his long anti-Fascist and anti-Nazi record, Toscanini could be denied entry too, under the letter of the law, because he supported Benito Mussolini briefly before the Fascists gained power in Italy in 1922.

Toscanini denounced the Fascist movement after the march on Rome in 1922, was stoned by a black-shirted mob in 1931 for refusing to conduct the Fascist anthem and refused to conduct at a Wagnerian festival in Germany in 1933 because of the Nazi treatment of Jews.

Toscanini has lived in this country almost continuously since 1925 and has a permanent alien residence visa.

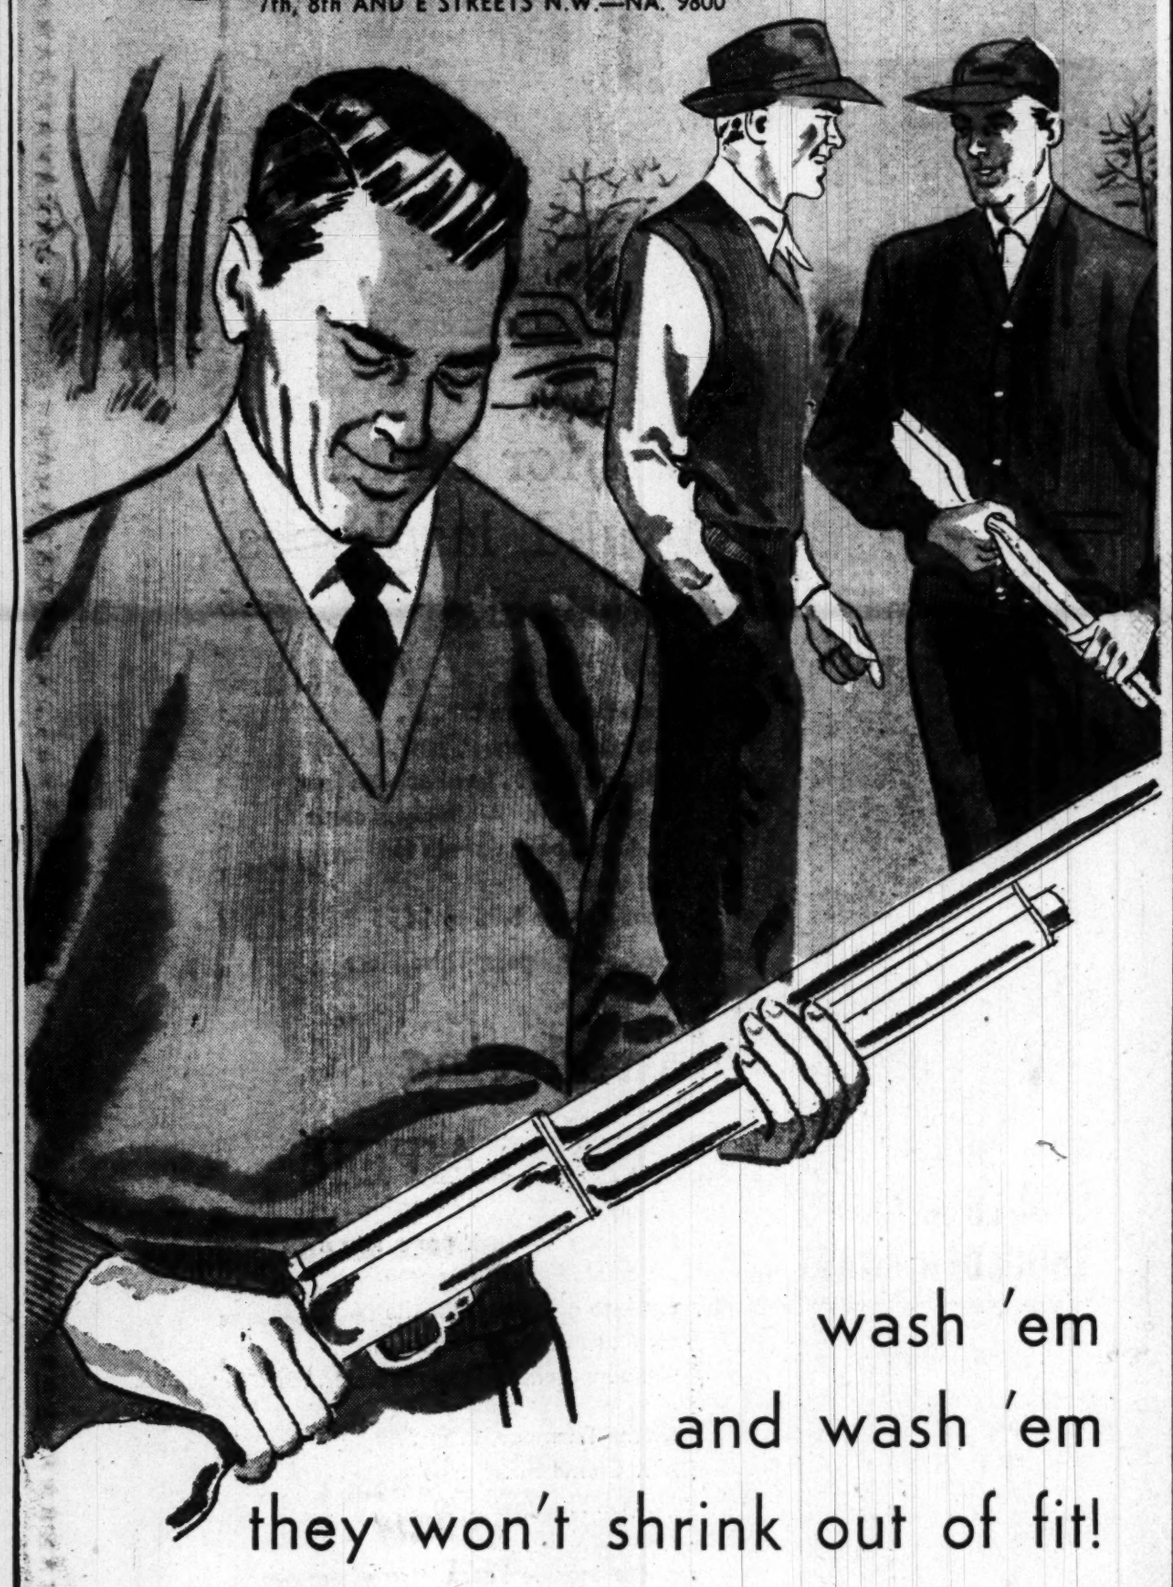

Since Thursday when the security law became effective, immigration authorities disclosed, between 75 and 80 aliens have been taken into custody and sent to Ellis Island as security suspects.

Among those detained was Carlos Rafael Rodriguez, coeditor of the Havana, Cuba, newspaper Hoy, who arrived last night to attend the inter-American press conference which opened today.

Rodriguez's newspaper recently was ordered by the Cuban government to suspend publication on the grounds that it was a Communist organ.

(The State Department said yesterday rules governing the admission of foreigners to this country under the new National Security Law are expected to be worked out within a few days)

Legion Told U. N. Can Protect Peace

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 9 (AP).—America and her allies have proved to the world that the United Nations will and can protect the peace, former Defense Secretary Louis Johnson told the national convention of the American Legion today.

"Had North Korea realized that in 100 days we would wreck the military machine it had taken more than four years to build, it might have been deterred from aggression," Johnson said. "Had North Korea known that even without using the atomic bomb we had the capacity to inflict such devastating punishment they might have hesitated even at the expense of antagonizing their revolutionary sponsors.

"Let us hope that the results in Korea will convince Soviet satellites that there is no glory in 'dying for dear old Kremlin' or carrying the ball for imperialist Russia."

Johnson emphasized he spoke as a private citizen and delegate. He had been invited before he was replaced as Defense Secretary.

The Legion's executive committee recommended that the 3277 delegates pass a resolution urging that any further aggression anywhere by Russia be met by immediate retaliation "by the United Nations police authority, including, if necessary, the release of atomic weapons." The executive committee also has demanded replacement of Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

President Truman sent the convention a letter, saying: "We must work together with a calm understanding and a firm resolve that this Nation will rise above the obstacles of the present and emerge from the dark fog of distrust which threatens."

The President said that throughout the world "and even here at home, the forces of reaction and repression have deliberately spread the gospel of hatred, seeking to discredit the American way of life and our love of truth. Now that the issue has been drawn, we must spare no effort to show the entire world that we stand united, but with a single goal."

Former Communist Louis Budenz said this country must be alert to concealed Communists, and charged that "fully 80 to 90 percent of the members of the Communist fronts are in reality concealed Communists, loyal to Moscow."

Maj. Gen. William Donovan, World War II OSS chief, told the convention the United States and United Nations have gained face in the Orient by the defense of South Korea, and "that in the Far East, at least, the timetable of Soviet conquest has been gummed up."

Gov. Fuller Warren of Florida invited the Legionnaires to meet their next year. Judge Vincent A. Carroll of Philadelphia, chairman of the standing committee on conventions, said the invitation will be accepted, although the official vote by the executive committee will not be cast until next month.

Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall called upon the Legion to help "overcome the vigorous opposition of small minorities" opposed to universal military training. In a message read by Past National Commander Paul H. Griffith, Marshall said such training "is so much to the vital interest of the American people, not to mention the world at large."

"In the past our military successes have invariably been received with an excess of optimism and an immediate reaction to reduce our armed forces or limit their future development," said Marshall.

"The immediate reaction to the Korean campaign seems to indicate repetition of this unfortunate habit of ours. But this time, with your most active help, I hope, we must not give way to the heavy pressures to relax our vigilance or emasculate our strength."

Johnson Says Position Similar to Baseball Pilot

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 9 (U.P.)—Former Defense Secretary Louis Johnson today, in a speech to the American Legion Convention compared his position in the military picture as similar to that of the baseball manager who gets none of the credit but all the blame. However, he made little mention of his resignation and his squabbles with the State Department.

Describing his former post as somewhat like that of "captain or manager" of the military team, he added:

"Speaking of managers, I am reminded of the bleacher fans at Yankee Stadium who credited the victories of the team to the players and always blamed Casey Stengel for temporary setbacks. So it has been with me. I had a job to do and to the best of my ability I did it."

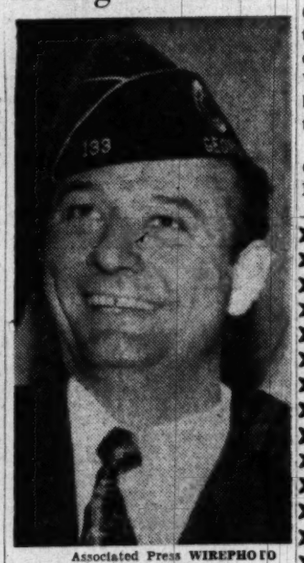

Lutheran Church Aides Voted Security Benefits

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 9 (AP).—The American Lutheran Church today authorized its lay employes to apply for Federal social security benefits. Delegates to the church's national convention adopted a resolution paving the way for lay workers to seek benefits under the expanded social security law.

The action extends eligibility to church employes in its national offices, Capital University in Columbus, and the Wartburg Press here.

Convention delegates also gave American Lutheran pastors permission to transfer their pension credits when they accept calls from other Lutheran bodies.

Georgia Negroes to Have Voice in Youth Talk

Gov. Herman E. Talmadge of Georgia was advised yesterday that he can send his all-white delegation to the forthcoming White House Youth Conference but that some Negro representatives also will be invited.

Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing, chairman of the National Conference Committee, informed Talmadge by letter that this will limit each member of the combined Georgia group to 2/3 of a vote.

He told Talmadge the conference was called to study the needs of all youth, and white people, "no matter how well-meaning and distinguished" can't understand problems of colored children the way Negroes can.

A spokesman for Ewing said he did not know whether the fiery "Hummon," who has vowed he would not be dictated by Washington, would send his 36-member white delegation under these circumstances.

In a letter to Ewing listing members of his all-white delegation, Talmadge said he had "no objection whatever to your naming such other delegates as you may see fit from the State of Georgia." But he added:

"The position of the State of Georgia is that we do not desire to participate in any conference unless the citizens of Georgia are permitted to choose their own delegates."

The conference is officially titled the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth. To be held here in December under Federal auspices, it aims to bring professional, scientific and other leaders from all parts of the country to discuss problems facing the Nation's children and young people.

Crab Wives Leave Spouses For Winter Sojourn South

SOLOMONS, Md., Oct. 9 (AP). Sooks have gone South.

That's where they belong, the Maryland Department of Research and Education says — down south in Chesapeake Bay, around the Virginia Capes.

"Sooks" are female blue crabs, the delectable eating kind. Their annual migration from the upper bay has been under way for a month, the department said today.

Crab Biologist David G. Cargo said records kept at Rock Hall, off Kent County, show only a few reluctant females have declined to leave the menfolk up North. Catches in the past four weeks have averaged 98.5 percent male, Cargo reported.

Commercial fishermen keep tabs on their crab hauls for the research department's laboratory. Records enable biologists to study size, sex and maturity for efficient management of crab resources.

Female crabs mate every summer in the Upper Chesapeake.

Two Become Ass't U. S. Attorneys

Two men were sworn in yesterday at District Court as assistant United States Attorneys.

Thomas A. Flannery, 32, of 3018 Gainsville st. se., is one of the new appointees. A former employe of the Department of Justice who has been in private practice for several years, he will be assigned to the Municipal Court criminal division.

Schaffer — Flannery
. . . Sworn in at District Court

A bachelor, Flannery is a graduate of Columbus University, where he received an L. B. in 1940. From 1942 to 1945, he was a lieutenant in Air Intelligence with the Army.

The other new man is Arthur D. Schaffer, 33, of 1601 Argonne pl. nw. He was transferred from the Office of Alien Property and will be assigned to the civil division.

He is a graduate of Brooklyn College and Georgetown University School of Law where he was awarded an L. B. n 1943. He is married and has one child.

Meanwhile, John J. O'Leary, who was an assistant United States attorney, was transferred to the Alien Property Office where he will be an attorney.

Ascoli Denies Policy Charge, By Knowland

NEW YORK, Oct. 9 (AP).—Dr. Max Ascoli, editor of the magazine The Reporter, said last night that Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) either had not read the magazine or "failed to understand what he read" when he called it favorable to Red China.

Knowland last week criticized the State Department for supplying the magazine to its Far Eastern consulates and missions. The Senator said it was "loaded" with pro-Chinese Communist propaganda.

"The Reporter pleads guilty to only one thing," Dr. Ascoli said in a statement. "In investigating and reporting on life in Red China we managed to secure the cooperation of some well-informed writers and failed to consult the China lobby.

"This, according to Senator Knowland, is pro-Red. If he is correct, he can indict medical research on cancer as 'loaded' with material favorable to cancer."

Dr. Ascoli said the issue of last January 3 was devoted to a study of Red China and United States policy, with a discussion of what America should or could do about it.

He quoted an editorial as saying, "the government of a foreign country has been taken over by men who don't like us, whom we don't like, and whose overthrow we cannot foresee or bring about."

He said the editorial held recognition of Communist China probably could not be avoided, but that it should be a "two-way affair."

"The Red Chinese must recognize the existence of the United States in a more considerate way than by kicking our diplomats in the teeth," he quoted the editorial as saying.

Australian Aide to Fly Here for Wool Parleys

SYDNEY, Australia, Oct. 9 (AP). An authoritative source in Canberra today said Commerce Minister John McEwen would fly from London to the United States Thursday for government-level talks on wool.

This follows international wool talks in London at which the United States brought pressure for either abandonment or modification of the Australian system of selling wool by auction. It had been reported the United States wants a guarantee it will get about 1,500,000 bales of the Australian wool clip of an estimated four million bales.

Folger Follows Bard's Request: 'Report Me 'n' My Cause Aright'

theatrical producers, newspaper correspondents, a physician interested in the history of medicine, and one minister in search of sermon material.

"Materials for sermons," the report said: " . . . we are prepared to supply in quantity."

Short Item in Press

Among the visitors there was one bad apple. "We did not meet him face to face, but if we ever identify him conclusively we can promise him at least a short paragraph in the local papers and a permanent inscription on the police blotter," said the report.

"He is the author of the legend, 'J.L.T., Va. '49.' incised with a sharp instrument on Brenda Putnam's statue of Puck—on the sole of Puck's left foot, to be specific."

Anything that concerns Shakespeare, concerns Dr. Louis B. (for "Booker," significantly enough) Wright, director of Folger and author of the report.

"The Folger Library," he wrote under the heading "River for Adoption," having the largest collection of Shakespeariana in the world, assumes certain responsibilities toward the Bard of Avon, some of them unusual."

Avon in "Sad State"

It seems, Dr. Wright wrote, that the Avon River is in "sad estate," particularly the lower reaches." This intelligence came from a friend in the British Embassy, Mrs. Robert Burns, the report continues.

"The lower Avon . . . from Evesham to Tewkesbury is in need of salvation. The locks have fallen into ruin and one could not load a barge with Anne's second-best bedstead and make the journey from Stratford to the Severne without running on a mudbank . . .

"If anyone wants to adopt the lower Avon as a conservation project, Mrs. Burns would be glad to hear of it."

(Dr. Wright, incidentally, was neither glad to learn nor glad to report that a second one of those comic books dealing with a play by Shakespeare has come out.

("They say," he said, "it's on Hamlet.")

Reason for Enthusiasm

The report bubbled with enthusiasm concerning the gift from one Henry Allen Moe of a copy of a book which "bears the promising title of 'A Treatise of Spousals, or Matrimonial Contracts: Wherein All the Questions Relating to that Subject are Ingeniously Debated and Resolved. By Henry Swinburne, author of the Treatise of Wills and Testaments (London, 1686).

"We call down particular blessings on donors like Mr. Moe," said the report, "who add to our historical source material. We wish more people wanted to give us books and fewer thought we needed locks of hair and other personal memorabilia of long-dead actors.

"One well-meaning soul even insisted upon giving us a tub of goldfish. We turned 'em down; it is already hard enough to keep neighborhood children out of Puck's fountain."

Apparently there is the same difficulty with "alert real estate dealers." One wrote the Folger Library a postcard saying: 'We have a client wishing to locate in your block. Would you care to sell?'"

It is good to know Folger officials said no.

Dreams of Fine Funerals

"But we would like to know something about that client," said Dr. Wright in the report. "Maybe he is a Western senator looking for a roomy place close to his work, or perhaps one of Washington's more baroque undertakers dreaming of the fine funerals he could launch from our portals.

Arms-Bearing Clause in New Citizen's Oath

District Court authorities yesterday included in a naturalization oath a clause stating that the new citizen agrees to bear arms or perform noncombatant service for the United States if required by law.

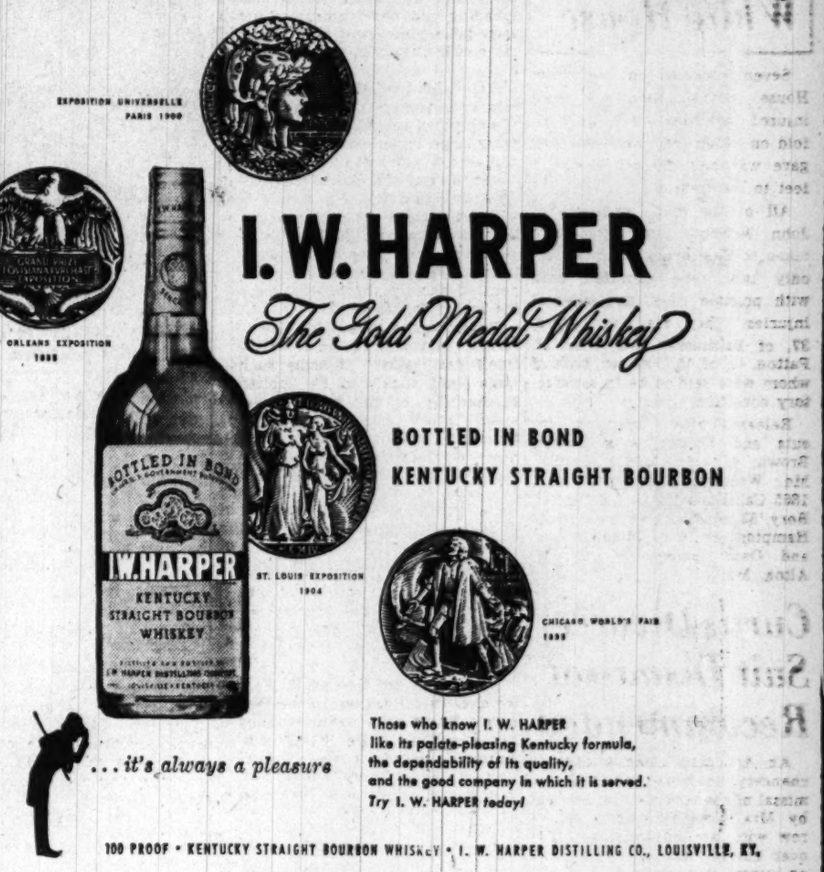

The amendment is provided by the Internal Security Act of 1950 passed by Congress recently and is mandatory except where the applicant proves he is a conscientious objector.

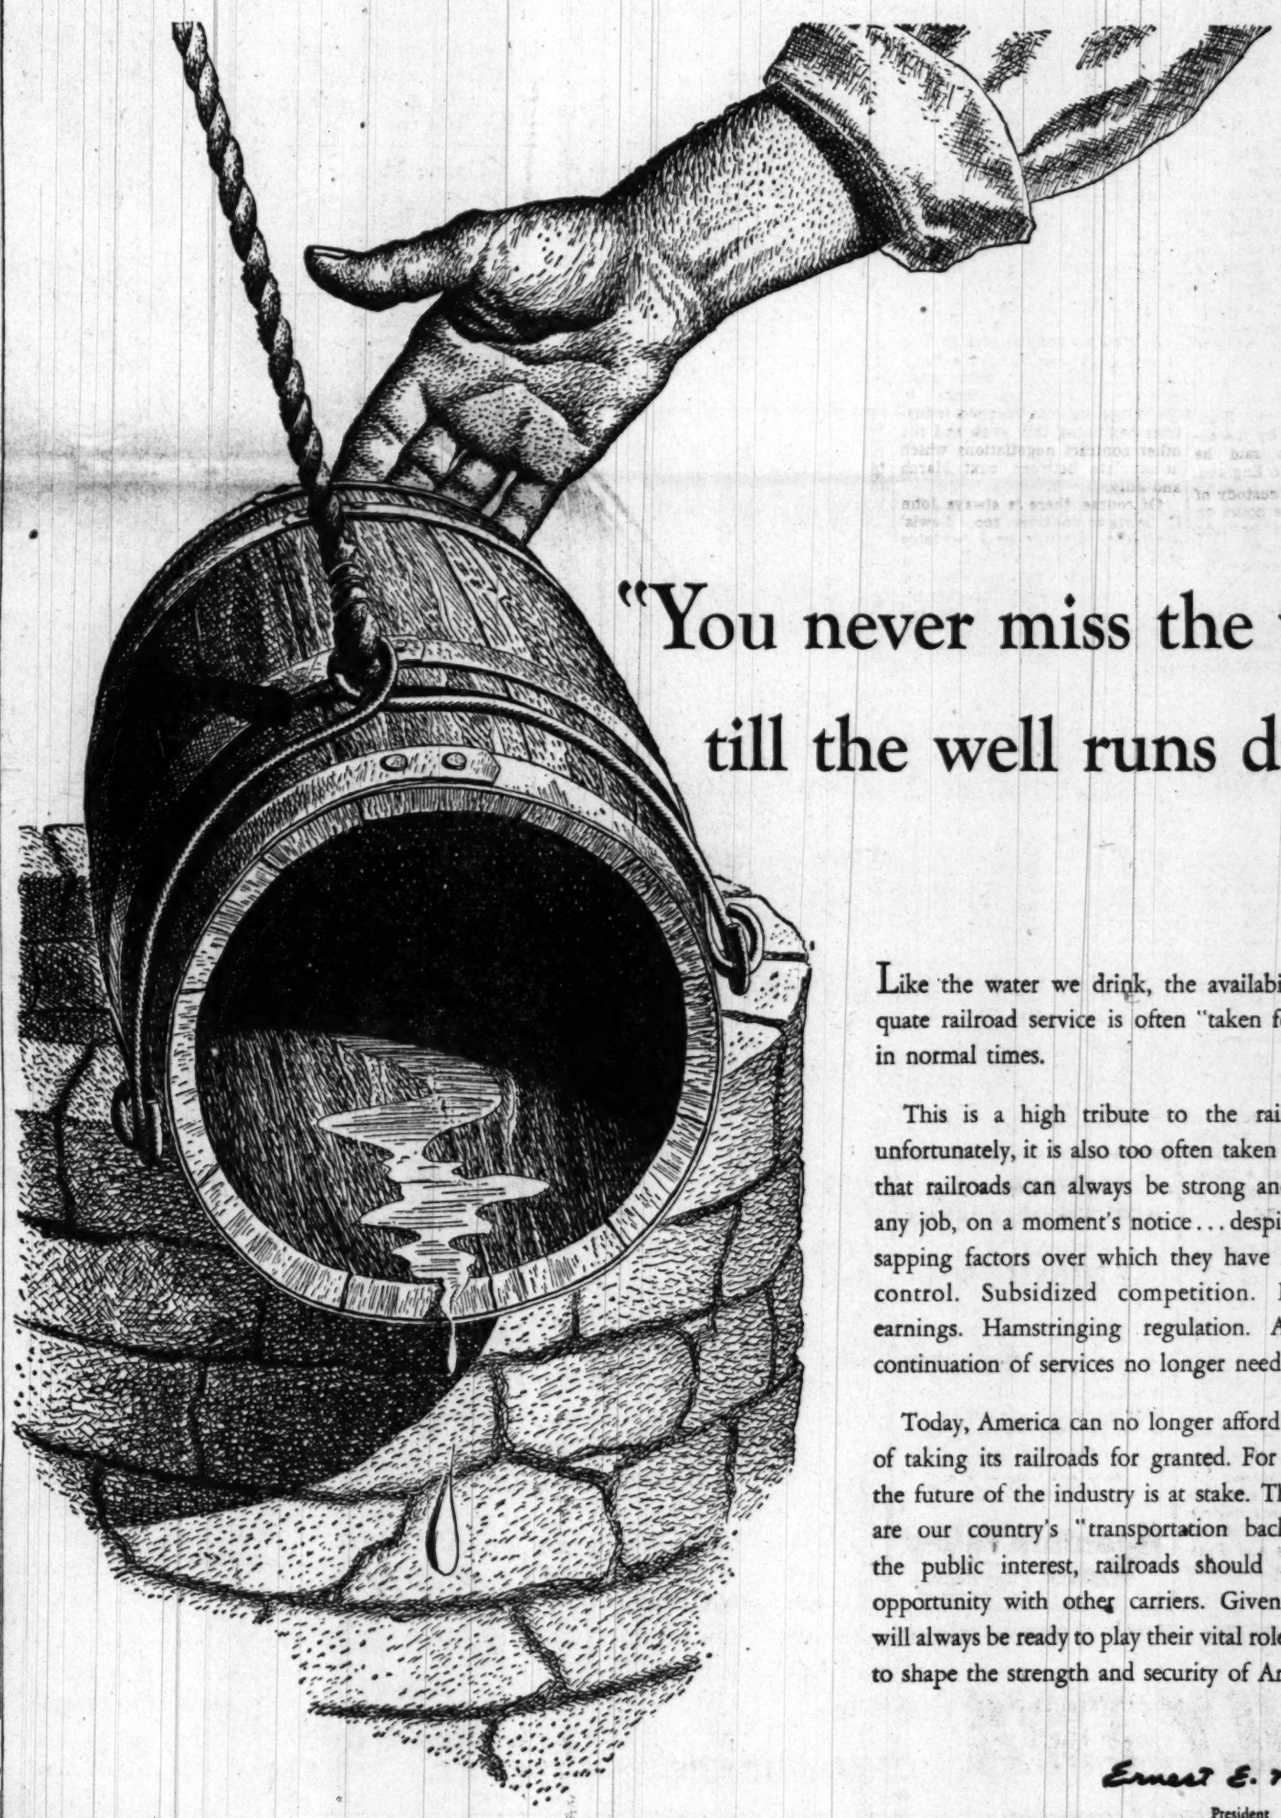

The new oath was taken by Mrs. Eva Marie Smart, 33, of 1500 N. Highland st., Arlington, who was sworn in by Judge Alexander Holtzoff. She is the wife of Joseph H. Smart, an ECA employe, and is a native of Peru.

The new clause says "I will bear arms on behalf of the United States or perform noncombatant service in the armed forces of the United States when required by law."

"You never miss the water till the well runs dry..."

Like the water we drink, the availability of adequate railroad service is often "taken for granted" in normal times.

This is a high tribute to the railroads. But unfortunately, it is also too often taken for granted that railroads can always be strong and ready for any job, on a moment's notice . . . despite strength-sapping factors over which they have little or no control. Subsidized competition. Inadequate earnings. Hamstringing regulation. And forced continuation of services no longer needed or used.

Today, America can no longer afford the luxury of taking its railroads for granted. For more than the future of the industry is at stake. The railroads are our country's "transportation backbone." In the public interest, railroads should have equal opportunity with other carriers. Given that, they will always be ready to play their vital role in helping to shape the strength and security of America.

Steel Wage to Offer Valentine a Problem

By The Associated Press

Steel wages promised yesterday to be the first big job—and at the same time the first big opportunity—for Economic Stabilizer Alan Valentine.

The prospect emerged amid reports that the White House was speeding the development of its wage-price policy and selection of more of the top men to administer it.

Dr. Valentine, 49-year-old former president of the University of Rochester and a director of several large business enterprises, will assume office next week as administrator of the Economic Stabilization Agency.

A price control director and a wage Stabilization Board of nine persons representing labor, industry, and the public are to be appointed shortly—probably before the end of this week.

Development of a "Big Steel" formula may well be one of Valentine's first tasks. If some such wage yard stick can be applied successfully to the wage movement started yesterday by Philip Murray's million-member CIO-Steel Workers Union in the steel industry, it might serve as a mold for other union wage demands when the bulk of contracts expires next spring.

It was the "Little Steel" formula which held down wartime wages of U. S. workers from 1942 until VJ-Day in 1945. The formula allowed a 15 percent wage increase over rates prevailing January 15, 1941.

Devised by Dr. George W. Taylor and his colleagues on the War Labor Board in a case involving the so-called "Little Steel" companies, it became a heavy lid on wage rates. Only "fringe" advances and correction of inequities were allowed by the board after that.

Murray is now dickering with "Big Steel" as well as "Little Steel," meaning that the giant U. S. Steel Corporation is involved. Murray may open his contract after November 1, but has asked the industry to reopen the contract at once. Up to last night 35 companies had agreed.

If the companies refuse increases and wildcat strikes persist, the Government may be forced to move in long before the strike deadline January 1.

If conciliation failed, the dispute might be checked to the new Wage Stabilization Board—which may then be headed by Cyrus S. Ching, present director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service. Ching is reported to be willing to submit to a draft by President Truman for the stabilization board chairmanship.

Whatever wage increase goes to Murray's union will have a bearing on settlements in other wage movements—including those in the telephone and railroad industries beginning this week and the other contract negotiations which accumulate between next March and July.

Of course, there is always John L. Lewis to consider, too. Lewis' contracts with the coal industry may be opened next April 1, but there are some operators who fear he'll ask them for a "voluntary increase before then. If Murray gets around 15 cents an hour, Lewis as certainly to try to get more.

The steel and coal outlook ties in only loosely with the idea of some Government economists that it will be necessary to slap price controls on some critical items very soon. Wages have not yet played a part in boosting prices on such materials as copper, rubber, wool and cotton—yet they have made striking price advances.

Mr. Truman may name his wage stabilization board and price director by Wednesday or Thursday, some observers believe. Names mentioned along with Ching's for public members of the wage board are those of David L. Cole, Patterson, N. J., labor lawyer, and Richard Lester, assistant director of the Department of Industrial Relations at Princeton University.

Mentioned as possible choices for the labor posts on the wage board are Harry C. Bates of the AFL bricklayers; Emil Rieve of the CIO textile workers, and Elmer Walker of the machinists or Thomas Kennedy of the mine workers.

A possibility suggested for the price control job is Marion Folsom, treasurer of Eastman Kodak and an industry representative on the mobilization policy board of W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the National Security Resources Board.

7 Workmen Injured at White House

Seven workmen on the White House reconstruction job were injured yesterday when the scaffold on which they were standing gave way and plunged them 15 feet to the ground.

All of the men, employes of John McShain, contractor, were taken to Emergency Hospital, but only two were admitted, both with possible chest and internal injuries. They are John Ward, 37, of Baltimore, and Allan H. Patton, 49, of 45 C st. sw., both of whom were said to be in satisfactory condition.

Released after treatment for cuts and bruises were Joseph Brown, 41, of Charles County, Md.; Woodrow Davenport, 35, of 1865 California st. nw.; Robert H. Rory, 32, of 365 Q st. nw.; Judge Hampton, jr., 26, of 28 Eye st. ne., and Oscar Smoot, 34, of Bel Alton, Md.

Curtis Divorce Suit Dismissal Recommended

An Arlington commissioner in chancery yesterday advised dismissal of the divorce suit brought by Mrs. Dorothy Curtis, whose row with her husband last May over custody of their child had an international flavor.

The commissioner, Attorney Leslie Hall, was appointed by Arlington Circuit Court to hear both sides of the case and make recommendations on Mrs. Curtis' divorce petition.

In his recommendation, Hall said Mrs. Curtis had "failed to corroborate her charges of cruelty constituting constructive desertion and abandonment" by her husband, William T. Curtis, of 5701 N. 10th rd., Arlington.

Hall added that Mrs. Curtis failed to prove her allegation "that she was justified in leaving Curtis. Such proof would be necessary in a petition charging constructive desertion, court officials explained.

The commissioner's recommendations will be studied by the court before a final decision in the divorce case is given.

The Curtis' four-year-old son, Henry, was whisked to Montreal, Canada, last May by the estranged husband who said he hoped to take the boy to England.

Mrs. Curtis, who had custody of the son except for three hours on Sundays, followed and brought young Henry back. Circuit Court then awarded her absolute custody of the child.

The mother, a nationally known figure skater under her maiden name of Dorothy Snell, now lives with her parents at 25 Poplar ave., Takoma Park, Md.

Ex-Official Files $250,000 Libel Suit

Frederick A. Humm, of 1204 N. Queen st., Arlington, former assistant building inspector here, filed a $250,000 libel and slander suit yesterday against two construction firm officials here.

According to the District Court suit, the allegedly defamatory statements cost Humm his job with the District government. The defendants are Henry Levin and Alvin Brown, of the Aldon Construction Co.

Humm complains that the defendants told authorities he had accepted a $300 loan from them in January while he had a building and contracting operation of theirs under supervision.

Belvoir Strike May End Soon

The expected completion Thursday of a non-union contractor's project at Fort Belvoir, Va., may pave the way for resumption of work on three other projects there by 150 striking carpenters.

Union carpenters working on the three projects went on strike after their work September 26 in a protest against working alongside the nonunion men.

An Army industrial relations spokesman said yesterday the nonunion firm should complete its work Thursday.

While B. B. Blackburn, secretary treasurer of the Carpenter's District Council, said he had no assurance that the strikers would return to work after that, the nonunion work has been the issue in the walkout.

The dispute has involved $337,000 in contracts for rehabilitation of 202 abandoned buildings necessary for expansion of Engineer Corps troop training.

Looking for POWER ?

Better Buy Buick!

THAT bold bonnet that stretches out before your eyes on a 1950 Buick isn't there just for show.

Lift it up, and you'll find that the space beneath is abundantly occupied, by one of the biggest hoodfuls of power you'll find in any motorcar.

What you're looking at is Buick's modern version of the high-compression valve-in-head engine, which gains extra wallop from the fact that it uses the exclusive Fireball combustion principle.

We could list a lot of mechanical reasons why fuel gives up extra power in a Fireball engine—how it's wrapped in a swirling, ball-shaped charge—how it burns with a smooth, clean thrust that delivers maximum action.

But the best way to find out what all this means is to touch off the eager horsepower out on the highway by a gentle nudge of your toe—and feel your shoulders press deep in the cushions behind them.

Now all this sounds thrilling, you say, but how about the feed-bills for all these horses? How about miles-per-gallon?

The practical answer to that one is found in this year's experience with the SUPER and SPECIAL—and even the ROADMASTER.

In all three, the horsepower was stepped up at the start of the year—and in all three, happy owners report the best mileage in modern Buick experience.

This is due to a little-known but authentic engineering fact—which is that an engine burns less gas when it doesn't have to labor. At any normal driving speed, therefore, extra power is extra thrifty.

So we say again—if you're looking for power—mighty power—buoyant power—silken power—thrifty power—better buy Buick.

Your Buick dealer is eager for the chance to demonstrate how sound this hint really is.

Only BUICK has Dynaflow Drive and with it goes:* HIGHER-COMPRESSION Fireball valve-in-head power in three engines. (New F-263 engine in SUPER models.) • NEW-PATTERN STYLING, with MULTI-GUARD forefront, taper-through fenders • TRAFFIC-HANDY SIZE, less over-all length for easier parking and garaging, short turning radius • EXTRA-WIDE SEATS cradled between the axles • SOFT BUICK RIDE, from all-coil springing, Safety-Ride rims, low-pressure tires, ride-steadying torque-tube

*Standard on ROADMASTER, optional at extra cost on SUPER and SPECIAL models.

Tune in HENRY J. TAYLOR, ABC Network, every Monday evening.

You put him there . . .

You . . . YOU put this boy in jail. You did it as surely as if you declared his guilt under oath in court. You did it as surely as if you led him into the cell yourself, clanked the iron door closed in his face, and turned the key on his hopes and his freedom. You did it that sun-bright day last October. Remember?

Remember when you said you couldn't afford to give through the Community Chest? When you said you had a car to pay for, a vacation to save for, yourself to look out for? That was the day you swore out the warrant for his arrest.

You didn't give . . . and you crippled the hand that would have steered him straight. You crippled the Red Feather Services that could have, — would have resolved the conflicts in his young, tortured soul. You curtailed the activities of the wise counsellors who would have given him warm understanding and a more balanced view of life. You cut down the facilities, and barred him from the Boys' Club, Boy Scouts, and other services where his restless energies could have found a healthy outlet, and his sensitive fingers learned to throw a baseball straight . . . instead of aiming a gun straight.

You didn't give . . . and you defrauded a boy of his chance in life.

Don't commit such a heinous crime this year. When the volunteer Campaign worker comes around and says "Give through the Community Chest" . . . think twice. Think how much you will give . . . then think how much more you can give . . . and give THAT. Give enough for all the Red Feather Services so that the young can have a chance in life, the old a chance for comfort, the sick a chance at health, everyone a chance for happiness.

McKeldin Makes Bid For Democrat Votes

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

LEONARDTOWN, Md., Oct. 9. Republicans today watched a high pressure drive to knock St. Mary's County out of the Democratic column in November.

Theodore R. McKeldin, GOP candidate for Governor, told a rally of 300 persons here tonight, "We Republicans can't be elected without the help of Democrats."

McKeldin said he was elected mayor of Baltimore in 1943 with the help of 52,000 erstwhile Democratic votes, and he added, "God bless them, may their tribe increase."

McKeldin was joined by John Marshall Butler, Republican candidate for the U. S. Senate, in attacking Senator Millard E. Tydings, (D., Md.), for his handling of the Senate probe into alleged subversives in the State Department.

Opponents To Tour

Tydings, who is running for his fifth term, and Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., are expected to tour the county on Saturday as the Republicans did today.

Local Republicans count on three factors in their hopes of carrying the county in the November 7 election:

1. McKeldin ran Lane a close race in St. Marys four years ago. The tally was Lane, 2583, McKeldin, 2175.

2. St. Marys County was one of those which Lane failed to win in the hotly contested primary with George P. Mahoney, of Baltimore. The latter got about 2800 votes to about 1800 for Lane.

3. A bitter primary fight for the State senatorial nominations divided the Democrats, and Republicans think they will draw some support from each of the losing factions.

The county is part of the congressional district long represented by Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.). His opponent, Thomas S. Carr, of Annapolis toured the county today with Butler and McKeldin.

'A Fighting Chance'

In tonight's rally, in the St. Marys County courthouse, William A. Gunter, of Cumberland, Republican candidate for state attorney general, said the GOP has "a fighting chance," to win the November election. He said the Republicans win in Maryland about every 20 years.

Gunter criticized the Lane tax policy as one of "tax, tax, tax," and said Lane and the Democrats had parroted the Republicans' promise to eliminate the sales tax on food and on other purchases below 50 cents.

Gunter said that when Mahoney stepped aside for Lane at the state Democratic convention, "Mahoney gave Lane a watchcase, now let's give him the works on November 7."

Butler charged that Tydings had used "legal tricks" to keep out of the State Department investigation witnesses' testimony and documents that the Republicans had wanted to bring in. Butler said, "the whole investigation has left doubts and wonderment in the minds of a great many people."

McKeldin said, "We believe there are too many traitors in Washington and that nothing is being done about it."

Chairman of the meeting was State Senator Paul Bailey, Republican candidate for reelection against Oliver Guyther, Democrat.

Enters Dispute

DAR Leader Blasts 'Flood' Of UN Flags

The head of the Daughters of the American Revolution yesterday entered the American flag-U. N. flag dispute.

Mrs. James B. Patton, national DAR president general, urged all DAR members to "resist the un-American effort which is being made to fly the flag of the United Nations above or in equal prominence with the Stars and Stripes."

She declared that "in 1933 was started the effort to take the Stars and Stripes out of the sight of the people."

"Flood" of U. N. Flags

The dispute originally was between Charles C. Ralls, national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the Agriculture Department.

Ralls charged Sunday that the Agriculture Department was making an "apparent effort to flood the country with U. N. flags" to supplant the American flag over the country's schools.

Ralls said the Agriculture Extension Service is supplying UN flag kits to 4-H Clubs and women's farm clubs, urging club members to be "modern Betsy Rosses."

An Agriculture Department spokesman, however, denied the department has any intention to "supersede" the American flag. The idea, he said, is to have it displayed parallel to the American flag, as at General MacArthur's headquarters.

Urges Legislation

Mrs. Patton, however, urged Congress to enact legislation to "prevent the flag of the U. N. or any other flag from being displayed above the Stars and Stripes" in the United States, its territories or possessions.

"There is no need ever to display the U. N. flag," she said, "except at a United Nations meeting."

"The unpatriotic effort" to lower the place of the American flag, she declared, started with the statement of a Government effort that flagpoles atop Government buildings "are not in good taste."

Progressives Lose Decision On Ober Oath

ELLICOT CITY, Md., Oct. 9 (AP). Two members of the Progressive Party today lost another round in their fight to get on the November ballot without signing loyalty oaths required by the Ober law.

The Secretary of State had refused them places on the ballot because they declined to take the oath required by Maryland's law against subversives. A Circuit Court decision today upheld this move.

Louis Shub, seeking to run for Governor, and Thelma Gerende, would-be candidate for the Second District congressional seat, went to court, arguing that the so-called Ober law pledge was illegal.

Today, Judge James A. Clark of the State's Fifth Judicial Circuit, handed down a decision in which he said the two had not been deprived of their rights and that the oath is not a violation of the State constitution.

I. Duke Avnet, attorney for the Progressives, said he would take the case to the Court of Appeals. Arrangements were being made today to advance the case on the court's calendar.

The suit, which had been brought on behalf of four candidates, attacked the entire law, which provides for heavy fines and jail sentences for anyone convicted of tryng to overthrow the Government by force. Judge Clark's decision was restricted to the loyalty oath section of the law.

'Dangerous'

St. Elizabeths Patient Flees From Guard

A patient described by police as "dangerous" escaped from St. Elizabeths Hospital at about 11 a. m. yesterday and was still at large last night.

He is John P. Freeman, jr., 26. Police described him as a Negro, 5 feet 4 inches, about 134 pounds, of average build. Coatless and hatless, he was wearing khaki trousers and a brown pin-stripe shirt.

Freeman, police said, broke lose from an attendant on the hospital grounds after he had been taken to the medical building for dental treatment. He jumped over a fence (although handicapped by leather cuffs which shackled his wrists) and escaped police reported.

Police records show Freeman was arrested last October on a charge of carnal knowledge involving a 13-year-old girl. After a preliminary hearing in Municipal Court, he was sent to Gallinger Hospital for mental observation.

Freeman's mother, Mrs. Creola Freeman, lives at 424 M st. se., and his wife, Bernice, at 1140 Seaton rd. se., police said.

Professor Is Bettor To Trap 25 in Raids

MEDIA, Pa., Oct. 9 (AP).—A professor turned witness today and told how he bet on the numbers—and lost.

Prof. Herbert W. Allison of the Pennsylvania State College center at Swarthmore, testified at the trial of 25 men arrested in gambling raids that he spent all last summer working as a private investigator for the district attorney.

Judge Henry G. Sweney asked Allison, whose work led to the arrest of the 25, if he ever won on the numbers.

Said the professor: Not once."

Ex-Official Of GOP Backs Smith in Va.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Oct. 9 (AP).—Maj. Henry A. Wise, a former Republican National Committeeman, reversed his political field today for the third time in two years.

The veteran GOP leader urged Republicans in the Eighth Congressional District to vote for Democratic Congressman Howard W. Smith in the November 7 general election. District Republicans have nominated Tyrrell Krum, of Fairfax, to run against Smith for the second time.

A year ago, Wise came up with a double-reverse political play. In the summer primaries for governor, he urged Republicans to enter the Democratic primary and vote for John S. Battle. Then he switched in the general election and urged the election of Republican Walter Johnson over Battle.

Wise issued a statement today indorsing the stand of Republican William R. Shaffer, of Shenandoah County. Shaffer earlier said he would support Democratic Representative Burr P. Harrison for re-election in the Seventh District in preference to the GOP nominee, Jacob A. Garber.

West End Citizens Pick Wasson Again

Walter F. Wasson, of 2107 H st. nw., was elected president of the West End Citizens' Association for the eleventh year in a row last night.

As first president, the 20 members present at the meeting chose Lester H. Steinem, who was recently nominated to run for president of the Federation of Citizens' Associations.

Also elected were the Rev. William Mayo, second vice president; Mrs. Estella Sykes, third vice president; Mrs. William O. Rogers, secretary, and William R. Brown, treasurer.

The association voted to reduce its annual dues from $1.25 to $1. The dues were raise last year to cover subscription to The Citizen, but that newspaper is no longer the official organ of the federation.

Burleith Citizens

The Burleith Citizens' Association last night voted not to make any group contributions to the Community Chest, Red Cross, Boys' Clubs or similar organizations.

Members attending the meeting at the Gordon Junior High School decided that, because they make their individual contributions, further contributions are not the function of the organization.

The group also discussed the subject of financial contributions to the court fight against a gas rate increase, but took no action.

Glover Park Citizens

George Morris Fay, United States Attorney for the District, last night told the Glover Park Citizens Association that he is redoubling his efforts to cut gambling in Washington.

Fay discussed the progress of his anti-gambling drive and, said its success depends on citizen support.

After a heated discussion, the group voted 30-29 not to support a request by a pre-school mothers' group for a shelter at the Stoddert Playground.

The members meeting at Stoddert School, gave their executive committee authority to spend up to $100 in contributions to the fight against a gas rate increase.

American University Park

Inspector John Fondahl, acting director of civilian defense for the District, last night discussed atom defense preparations with the American University Park Citizens' Association.

Speaking at the meeting in Hurst Hall, American University, Inspector Fondahl said that volunteers, if needed, will be taken more on an individual rather than on a group basis this time.

The association again voted to support the annual Hallowe'en programs at the community's recreation center.

Hillcrest Association

The Hillcrest Citizens Association appropriated last night $20 towards expenses in the fight against an increase in gas rates.

Meeting at the East Washington Heights Baptist Church, the group also appropriated $25 for the Halloween Carnival at the Hillcrest Playground October 31. Delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations were instructed to vote for an increase in federation dues from $10 to $15 per year.

Kalorama Citizens

The Kalorama Citizens Association last night went on record as opposed to the gas rate increase.

A nominating committee was appointed to prepare a slate for elections at the next meeting.

Postlude

Long Musical Era Spanned By Chanaka

By Paul Hume

Anthony Chanaka's piano recital in the Phillips Gallery last night embraced a far wider period in musical history than most concerts.

Queen Elizabeth, in 1575, "granted full privilege and license unto our well-beloved servants Thomas Tallis and William Birde . . . to sell and utter any printed books or papers of any song or songs . . ."

A few years later one John Bull was appointed music professor in Gresham College, largely because of his favor with the same Queen.

Each of these gentlemen was represented on Chanaka's recital with one of his best known works, a Jig and a Pavane of great charm, skillfully played. It is understood of course that the piano was invented roughly two hundred years after these men lived.

At the other end of the musical survey stands Aaron Copland, one of America's finest composers. Copland's sonata is 10 years old. It opened the evening's recital.

In it Chanaka found his most expressive message. A piano can bang and clatter a lot in this piece if the artist is not aware of its inner beauties. Last night he made them apparent to us in ways that no earlier playing by other pianists had. This was especially true of the first two movements. The final movement still seems unnecessarily long, with a middle section of obtrusive irrelevance.

A Gavotte and Variations of Handel moved with dazzling ease. In a different mood, variations by Gabriel Maure failed to impart their real poetry. The trouble seems to lie in a lack of repose and assurance within the pianist. His technical resources are equal to any test he sets them.

But the inherent elegance of Faure's style was missed in the haste to proceed from one movement to the next. Something of this carried over into the final group of light but agreeable pieces by Poulenic. Here, more than in most music, one needs a sense of the light touch—the tongue in the cheek. That could come with more frequent appearances before audiences.

Falls Church Drain Needs Are Reported

The Falls Church City Council last night got a "top priority" list of areas where storm drainage improvements are needed most.

City Manager W. R. Woodbury, who submitted the list, estimated total cost of improvements to nine top projects at $247,000. Six other needed improvements, of lower priority, he said, would bring the cost of the work to $500,000.

Woodbury said the Council must find a way to finance the top projects. Start of work would depend on when the cement shortage is eased, he said.

Here is the way Woodbury listed the areas, in the order of preference: Hillwood ave. at Lee hgwy.; Timber ln. and Oak st. bridge; Oakhaven; completion of the Marshall st. project; E. Broad st. to Fairfax st.; Grove ave.; Midvale st.; W. Fairfax st. at Tripp's Run, and Lawton st.

The Council asked Woodbury to prepare for its approval a plan and policy on municipal improvements of commercial zones in the Falls Church area. The plan should be submitted by January 1, they said.

Asked was a plan which would promote such facilities as park space, sidewalks, street lighting, drainage, beautification and traffic control.

The Council adopted a resolution pledging budgeting of a substantial part of the business license tax revenues for several years to this purpose.

It also asked the city treasurer to get an opinion from the State Attorney General on legality of the Council's recent action in voting free water for the St. James parochial school.

Preparedness Effort Urged by McCormack

House Democratic Leader McCormack, of Massachusetts, said yesterday America must be "alert for military invasions of other world areas."

He said they might be similar to the Communist effort to seize South Korea or "even more grave developments."

In a statement issued through his office, McCormick said there is now "an apparent tendency to relax" among some people. He declared "our preparations for peace through increased military and economic strength must go forward rapidly and with greater energy and unity."

Marriage License

The Rev. Carl Heath Kopf has a good point when he says that the District and Maryland should not permit one party to a proposed marriage to take out a license without the knowledge or consent of the other party. The coercion that sometimes results from such a practice was tragically illustrated last week when a Marine obtained a license, threatened the girl he wished to marry with death if she did not submit to the ceremony, and then tried to force a Rockville pastor to perform the marriage. It is not to be supposed that these particular circumstances, which ended with suicide on the part of the Marine, will be often repeated. But overly eager suitors do frequently obtain marriage licenses as a means of bringing final pressure upon the person they wish to marry. Certainly marriage is a relationship that should be entered into deliberately and with the full and uncoerced consent of both parties. If arrangements were made for the acceptance of affidavits in cases where one party could not be present, no hardship would result from a general rule requiring both the man and the woman to appear in person in applying for a marriage license.

Rehabilitating Korea

Today the United Nations Economic and Social Council will tackle the toughest problem of its career—the formulation of a practical relief and rehabilitation plan for Korea. That the international rehabilitation effort is so late in even its preliminary stages reflects little credit on the leadership in the General Assembly; the need to be ready with a program was obvious months ago. Korea has felt all the ravages of war; her cities and villages have been devastated and her roads, bridges and other communications have been destroyed. The one bright spot is the fact that the rice crop has not been badly curtailed—provided that men can be found to harvest it.

The slowness of the Assembly by no means indicates an unwillingness on the part of members to contribute. Already 20 countries have offered money and supplies aggregating 15 million dollars—supplies ranging from rice from Thailand and the Philippines to cod liver oil from Iceland. The United States has pledged money, materials and men in addition to what it has already expended on relief, and there ought to be many more substantial offers. It will be a big job to coordinate these offers and arrange shipping—but a job that must be done to continue and enlarge the international character of the effort.

Direct relief such as General MacArthur has been handling is only the first and easiest part of the task. The long-term need is to restore Korea as a working economic entity. Even with a ready plan, this probably will take a minimum of five years and cost in excess of a billion dollars. Here is where the most hard-headed thinking is needed, for the U. N.'s previous experience with an international relief and rehabilitation effort, UNRRA, was not altogether satisfactory. How the program is to be administered, what use is to be made of existing U. N. agencies, what checks will be available on proper use of money, what sums individual nations are to contribute—these are some of the points that must be settled.

Fortunately, while the Economic and Social Council works out its plan, a long-range American program for Korea already exists under ECA. President Truman, in a directive, has made a distinction between the direct relief job assigned to the Army and the long-term rehabilitation objective of ECA. Moreover, ECA has funds at least for a start; on July 1 it had a new appropriation of 90 million dollars plus a small carryover from fiscal 1950, and it has spent only 30 million dollars since the Korean war began.

Certainly the United Nations ought to make use of ECA experience, and indeed, ECA might well be deputized to conduct a part of the U. N. program, provided that other nations assume their share of support. The important thing, however, is to make whatever U. N. plan is evolved genuinely international in fact as well as name. Although the United States must expect to bear a large part of the financial burden, here is the place where the nations that did not directly assist the military effort can make their contributions most effectively felt. Greece furnishes an admirable example of what can be accomplished through a wise rehabilitation program. A similar program ought to be the United Nations' objective in Korea to give substance and stability to the newly asserted independence and unity.

Strength Behind Peace

Secretary Acheson was not thinking solely of the propagandists who picture the United States as a warmonger when he reduced our foreign policy to simple and unmistakable terms on Sunday night. He was thinking also of the Americans who tend to be carried away by the war spirit. "There is a very common tendency," he said, "for people who are putting their whole hearts and souls into a great task to think in terms of the logical absolute. This leads some few people to forget why we are making this great effort, and to proclaim that our object should be to bring about the very thing which we are trying so desperately to avoid—that is war." It is for this reason that he pleaded for self-discipline, restraint, coolness and steady nerves. His enlightened appeal for strength without bluster was especially fitting on the occasion of his receipt of the Freedom Award.

The core of Mr. Acheson's message was that war is not inevitable. That is an old theme, but it cannot be too often repeated. Armament and war are intimately related in the minds of the people. History abounds with instances in which armament programs have been a prelude to imperialism, aggression and war. Our own country has never been heavily armed in peacetime. It is only natural that many should now assume that the great defense effort of 1950-51 must be a preliminary to World War III. If that unthinking conclusion should be allowed to stand, however, there would be little hope for either the maintenance of peace or the survival of freedom.

There was nothing half-hearted about Secretary Acheson's support of rearmament for the Western world. On the contrary, he called it the only alternative to certain disaster—"our only way of preserving peace and freedom." What he asks the people to remember is that this buttressing of military strength has a peaceful purpose. War does become inevitable when brigands, aggressors or tyrannical imperialists obtain the military strength to make their will prevail. But war also becomes highly improbable if the balance of power is held by peoples who are primarily interested in peace and freedom. The present armament program is nothing more nor less than an attempt to put more power behind peace and freedom than the Soviet Union can bring to the support of its aggressive ventures. When that has been achieved, as Mr. Acheson pointed out, it should be possible to negotiate with the Soviet Union on a basis favorable to the free world.

Mr. Acheson brought clearly into focus another aspect of the problem that also needs repeated emphasis. "We must go forward with the creation of the life which we are defending," he said, "at the very time that we are building the defense." Free societies must demonstrate their vitality by helping people in want to obtain food as well as civil rights. The superiority of democracy over tyranny must be found in its day-to-day performance. In other words, the present contest is not between two blind forces struggling for power, and it must not be permitted to descend to that basis.

The outcome of the present struggle is thus seen to be dependent not merely upon the action of Congress, the President, the Secretary of State or the United Nations. All the free peoples have a part in it, and they should understand that self-discipline is scarcely less important than the making of weapons. To talk and act as though the end of our effort were war is not only a "terrible error," as Mr. Acheson pointed out; it also tends to undermine the very purpose for which the rearmament program is undertaken by creating new suspicions and strengthening the hold of Moscow on deceived peoples that otherwise would be willing to cooperate with this free-world program.

Assault Capital

There is small satisfaction for Washington in the fact that Chicago has taken the lead in aggravated assaults in Uniform Crime Reports compiled by the FBI. As Charles E. Davis, jr., and Jean Reiff pointed out in their story in this newspaper yesterday, on the basis of population Washington still had the highest proportion of aggravated assaults among all big cities in the country for the first half of 1950—1911 of them, or more than 10 a day. It also was fourth in murders, fifth in robberies and larcenies and sixth in burglaries on the adjusted basis. The one consolation in the report is the fact that aggravated assaults here decreased by 4.3 percent over the same period of 1949, and there also were decreases in murders, burglaries and larcenies.

The FBI cautions against minute comparisons of crime statistics between cities, noting that the crime rate may be affected by such things as the composition of the population, the number of police and the attitude of prosecuting officials. Significantly, New York is omitted from the compilation because of unreliable statistics—a procedure having been uncovered whereby police have been "pocketing" crime complaints, much as they did here three years ago. But while there are certain mitigating considerations in Washington's position, the fact that it is a cosmopolitan city with many transients is not the whole explanation of the high crime rate here. Nor can the incidence of crime be ascribed altogether to insufficient policemen. While the force still needs to be increased, Washington already ranks second in the number of policemen per capita. And it is hard to believe that the population of Washington is innately less law-abiding than that of other cities.

If the decrease in the number of aggravated assaults and similar crimes reflects more awareness on the part of the police of the seriousness of the situation, they are to be commended. Certainly the unfavorable publicity Washington has received ought to have stirred the community, including its law-enforcement officers, out of its lethargy. It is the facts themselves which make the publicity, and so long as a citizen can be assaulted virtually on the White House grounds the cleanup still has a long way to go. The putting down of these threats to life and limb ought to be the first task of the Police Department.

Trygve Lie's Tenure

Mr. Trygve Lie, secretary general of the United Nations, is now nearing the end of a five-year term in what must certainly be considered one of the most trying and difficult jobs in the world. He has been an exemplar of internationalism. Between the Scylla of Soviet ambition and the Charybdis of Western resistance he steered the fledgling U. N. with remarkable dexterity. There has been no partisanship in him save in behalf of the U. N. itself. He has sought rapprochement between the East and the West—an essential function of his office. Now and then, as in respect of seating the representatives of Communist China, he has taken positions at odds with the American point of view. But he was unequivocal in asserting and maintaining the authority of the U. N. when it was challenged by Communist aggression in Korea.

Mr. Lie announced nearly a year ago that he would not be a candidate for reelection. It is almost impossible, however, to think of anyone who could succeed him. In view of the existing tension between the Soviet bloc and the Western nations, no candidate put forward by either side would be likely to prove acceptable to the other. Unless the Security Council can agree upon retaining Mr. Lie and can persuade him to remain at his arduous post, it will probably be unable to make a recommendation to the General Assembly for a successor when his term expires on February 2. The U. N. Charter provides that "the secretary general shall be appointed by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council." Perhaps in the absence of a recommendation the General Assembly will be able to extend Mr. Lie's present term.

Quite apart from the difficulty of replacing him, the continuance of Mr. Lie in office seems to us of very great importance to the effective functioning of the United Nations. He is one of those who have never abandoned faith in the utility of the U. N. for the maintenance of peace. Speaking a week ago at the close of the Assembly's general debate, he set forth this simple credo:

> First, the United Nations must and can demonstrate its capacity to deal effectively with armed aggression now and in the future.
> Second, through the United Nations, it is still possible gradually to reduce the present tensions and, by patient work, to move toward a reconciliation of the conflicting interests so manifest in the world today.
>
> Third, the member states can and should use the United Nations and the specialized agencies in a comprehensive program aimed at effectively raising living standards within the next few years throughout the world, and especially among those 1500 millions who today live either in poverty or on its borderline.

This is doctrine which all men who hope for a free and peaceful world cannot fail to indorse. The Russians, after withdrawing from attendance at the Security Council and generally boycotting the activities of the United Nations, have seen fit to return to full participation. This in itself constitutes an acknowledgment, however unwilling, of the usefulness of the international organization.

Stabilization Chief

One thing certain about Dr. Alan Valentine, the new Administrator of Economic Stabilization, is that he is a man of courage. His undertaking is of mammoth proportions. He must work out both short-range and long-range price and wage stabilization policies and programs with a maximum of relief from skyrocketing prices and a minimum of shock to our economic system. The task calls for a broad understanding of the fundamentals of our economic system, for a fine combination of toughness and flexibility, a capacity for bold thinking and for tactful action in the public interest. It is doubtful whether any man would seem to measure up fully to the task when he first took it over, but Dr. Valentine has many qualities which commended him to the President and now commend him to the country.

As chief of the Netherlands mission for the Economic Cooperation Administration in 1948-49, he obtained a close acquaintance with an important aspect of the postwar economic problems of the free world. In that position as well as in the presidency of Rochester University, he has had valuable administrative experience. While he had no part in the economic control efforts during World War II, he will have the advantage of beginning his work free from any antagonisms left by those ventures. His background indicates also that he is a man of ideas, of vigor and self-confidence. It remains to be seen how successfully he can work with others on a problem of baffling scope and complexity. The important thing at this stage is that the Economic Stabilization Agency at last has a head. Everyone who understands the dangers that inflation is bringing in its wake will give Dr. Valentine and the new agency his best wishes for their success.

Stassen And Stalin

I see that Harold Stassen proposes to meet Joseph Stalin and talk over the troubled affairs of our world. In my opinion this proposal should be granted all the respect it deserves. Stassen has a knack for making gloomy outlooks bright again. Let his record speak:

It looked bad for Tom Dewey in early 1948. Taft was undoubtedly a strong candidate for the Republican nomination, Vandenberg was gaining stature as a dark-horse, Stassen was stomping through the primaries, and after all, Dewey had already lost once. But Stassen challenged Dewey to a debate in the Oregon primaries, and Dewey made him look a little ridiculous. After Dewey picked up those Oregon delegates he snowballed his regained prestige right on to the Republican nomination.

A little while later it looked bad for Harry Truman. International relations were sagging, Harry Vaughan was sagging, the cost of living was definitely not sagging, and after all, Truman was only in the White House by accident. But Stassen spoke out against the farm price-support program, and Charles Brannan made him look a little ridiculous. After Truman picked up those Midwestern farmer votes he swept right back into the Presidency.

It looked bad for James Duff a little while back. The Pew money was against him, the Grundy machine was against him, his opponent was very energetically against him, and after all, Duff was only a maverick Republican at best. But Stassen threw his power and prestige behind the Pew-Grundy candidate and Duff made him look a little ridiculous. After Duff won the nomination people began to talk of a new power in Republican politics.

Well, things are not looking too good right now for Joseph Stalin. The Communists lost out in the Italian elections, Tito broke out of the orbit designed for him, the Berlin blockade fizzled, and after all, the North Koreans were only fooling—no need for all that rough stuff.

Things are not looking too good for Joseph Stalin right now but Harold Stassen is on the job. And if once again he is made to look a little ridiculous, at least we will know the Russians did not invent that process.

Dewey's Manners

Noting several peppery and slightly pontifical letters of late among your unusually interesting and otherwise enjoyable correspondence I make so bold as to take exception thereto. I refer to letters in praise of Tommy Dewey and his latest exhibition of bad manners and worse taste, to put it mildly, in insulting, gratuitously, the legates of a foreign power at a purely social function and on a strictly diplomatic occasion.

Dewey, never noted for his tact or charm, was there as an invited guest and in a way as host by reason of his high office of Governor. He chose to make political capital of the opportunity by a bitter tirade attacking this foreign power and thereby insulting its diplomatic representatives accredited to the U. N. who promptly got up and walked out.

I submit that this is just a bit beyond the purview of the respected Emily Post. It concerns international diplomatic usage and protocol and ancient international law. The Greeks and Romans considered the persons and rights of ambassadors and legates, even those of a nation or a tribe with whom they were at war, as inviolable. After 2000 years these persons and rights are more than ever jealously safeguarded. The doctrine of extraterritoriality is analogous and equally universally observed. CONRAD REID.

Korean Atrocities

In view of the usually high moral responsibility of your paper, I think it was an unfortunate mistake to print what your own headline called the atrocity "tale" from the Korean front on September 30. Such unproved tales encourage the danger of real atrocities and even the use of the atom bomb on innocent civilian populations by the more hot-headed and unthinking in our own armed forces.

Yes, the bodies of South Korean civilians and also some of our own soldiers, were found in the Taejon prison yard. But there is no proof that these unfortunates were not killed by our own or even enemy artillery and their bodies assembled in the city for identification and burial. Why should we believe when dead bodies are brought to light in a war that all North Koreans have by some unexplained chemistry been turned into beasts, while all the South Koreans have remained "good guys."

Numerous press dispatches have told us that the North Korean army held American prisoners and treated them well and that they were liberated as our forces advanced.

Agreement With Russia

Mr. Harry Daniels, in his letter of October 2, expressed a widespread belief by saying that to discuss peace terms with the Soviets would have no more significance "than the devil reciting the Rosary." But I wonder how, then, peace will come about. Even when we create "situations of greater strength," we will not get peace without negotiations.

Sumner Welles stated in his book, Where Are We Heading? that "the Soviet government, during the years between the two great wars, had gained a deserved reputation for complying with the international agreements which she had contracted."

Winston Churchill, not a bad judge on international affairs, has again and again advised to seek an over-all agreement with Russia. His argument has been that the Soviets will keep an agreement if it is in their interest to do so, and that it must be possible to find a basis of common interest for such an agreement so that it has a good chance of some duration.

International agreements were never so reliable as contracts are in civil life, and they cannot become reliable enough for our atomic age without a world authority with power to enforce the international law. Therefore it was logical for Winston Churchill to say, as he did on June 29: "There is no hope for the world unless we get some kind of world government." But short of world government, the next best hope for a certain period of years is a general settlement of our differences, that would bring some degree of order.

"Greatest Nation"

We Americans seem to have given our country a new name. It emanates from White House, United Nations, commentators and the ordinary citizen. It is, "This, the greatest nation in the world." It is terrifying to hear it used quite casually, for one asks one's self, "By what standard can one measure greatness?" The implication is that we have chosen them.

If one is thinking merely of size and physical power and speed of progress, I presume no one would wish to argue since we were endowed with natural resources not to be found elsewhere, and with a climate which of itself produces a measure of health and energy (as is often witnessed by many who visit us) that is quite astounding.

I believe, however, that the greatness implied in the name referred to, will be taken by the peoples of most other countries to mean not this kind of greatness, but one of quality, or spirit, or national character.

To many Americans it seems that the greatness of their country lies in her dedication to individual freedom, her determination that she shall not be dominated by any one group, that she shall freely elect those in whom she believes, that none shall be required to serve militarily except in time of national emergency, and that none shall be unduly taxed for the privilege of being a citizen. Rather, it seems that the duties of democratic living shall be those assumed out of a sense of responsibility for the national welfare and an appreciation of the duties inherent in citizenship.

But we have come now to a time when such a description, even allowing for faulty statement, is inadequate. It pictures qualities inadequate for our day and our responsibility. The world needs more than greatness in these terms. It needs a greatness which, although it has given much, gives more.

It needs a greatness which does not think in terms of what is best for us, only, but of what is best for other peoples. This requires that we study and know and have a human contact with these other peoples—a thing barely begun.

It needs a greatness that can take a long view and that can remember that a century and a half ago people came to this country in search of freedom of spirit and mind. This greatness requires that we see where we are going and appraise the steps we take. We need to ask ourselves what will be the spiritual price of our present dedication to the idea that we must become the strongest Nation in the world.

Wars, we have fought, in part at least, to save others who were hard-pressed. But this is not that. That has been an emergency, police-action type of war. Now we are setting out on a new course, one dedicated to the belief that we must first of all be strong, and second, be anything else. We are taking on a new American way. Here we leave the past and chart a new future and perhaps there will be those who a generation from now look back with sadness to the America that was. As Prime Minister Nehru said only a few days ago in Lucknow, "If a nation develops a military mentality, there is no hope for it . . . Evil supports itself by armed strength and we have to meet it by armed strength. But as we meet it we become infected with it."

There is no real greatness but a greatness of the heart and understanding. It does not matter in actual terms what our lands or goods are. It does not even matter how literate a country is or what its standard of living. Other countries much more hard-pressed than ours, have known greatness for centuries before we were even a Nation, and are still great by all true standards. For they see that the heart and soul are where one takes the dimensions of eternal qualities.

Dualism Over China

By Marquis Childs

British Attitude

LONDON—The swift victories in the Korean war have brought new hope that the conflict may be quickly concluded and the catastrophe of a third world struggle averted for the immediate future at least. But inside this government there is also a deep-seated fear of involvement with the Chinese Communists and loss of all Asia to the Western world in endless warfare between the colored and the white peoples.

This is a reflection of earlier concern over American policy in regard to Formosa. It has been little realized in the United States how profound this concern was in Britain and elsewhere in western Europe.

Late in the summer Prime Minister Clement Attlee faced something like a rebellion in the executive council of the Labor Party. Attlee came before a showdown session of the executive council. Details of this meeting have never been reported, but they are known to many in the party. At this meeting, Attlee was asked the following question:

"If the United States becomes involved in war with Communist China as a result of its policy toward the Chinese Nationalists on Formosa, will Great Britain be committed to become an ally of the United States in such a war?"

Attlee replied with a flat "No." Word of this stand was conveyed in top secret cables to Washington. It is believed here to have played a part in the August crisis between Secretary of State Acheson and Secretary of Defense Johnson. Some Labor Party members think it influenced Truman's radio broadcast "clarifying" American policy on Formosa and may also have contributed to the decision to drop Johnson.

THERE are Americans, of course, who speak scornfully of the British attitude as appeasement. But behind the British viewpoint is the realization of how Western forces could be bogged down in the vast swamp of Asia, leaving the Soviet Union free to go as far as she desired in Europe. Some informed officials here believe this to be the deliberate objective of the present Russian policy.

As a consequence, Britishers sometimes find the dualism of American policy difficult to follow. For example, a message conveyed indirectly to the Foreign Office here from a high American official was that Britain would have to choose between India and the United States. This was at the time when Prime Minister Nehru was trying to negotiate for peace in Korea in notes to Stalin and Acheson.

The firm conviction here is that this is not the nature of the choice. British policy is based on the belief that it will be possible for the West to cooperate with the Asian peoples including, eventually, the Chinese, who sooner or later will have rejected the role of satellite to Russia.

This explains the patient and long-drawn-out efforts of the British to enter into diplomatic relations with Communist China. The British representative now in Peiping is hoping to bring those negotiations to a close in the near future. In most respects, this representative already has diplomatic status.

THOSE Americans who regard the British as guilty of appeasement consider the negotiations with Peiping a shameful spectacle of the humiliation of a great power. But the British reply that the old days when one Western nation could send a gunboat or two to subdue the Chinese are gone forever and failure to realize it may mean a catastrophic and endlessly prolonged struggle with Asia.

Behind the British attitude is another psychological factor little understood in America. This is the feeling that World War II very nearly wrote an end to Western civilization as developed in western Europe, and a third world conflict would certainly finish it off. Western Europe felt so much more directly than the United States the crushing impact of two terrible wars.

Last week the British treasury announced gold and dollar reserves at two and three-fourths billions, the highest figure reached since the end of the war. This is attributable to many causes, of which the Marshall Plan probably is the first and foremost. But British austerity, plus the effects of the devaluation of the pound, certainly had a lot to do with it.

It has been a painful process which a new war would wipe out at a single stroke, and the opportunity might never come again to rebuild an economy in which at least some measure of freedom was retained. This helps to explain a certain amount of foot-dragging and reluctance on rearmament. But these psychological factors cannot be ignored in calculating policy and weighing the costs and consequences of the basic objective, which, as the British see it, is to preserve peace with honor and freedom if that can possibly be done.

Truman To The Marines

The Marines may exult over the sale of President Truman's letter which netted them $2500, but according to law and the general usage the world over, a letter actually belongs to the writer, rather than to the receiver, and the $2500 should come to Mr. Truman.

By the sale of the letter and the notorious publicity it has caused the Marines have forfeited the prestige they formerly enjoyed with the public. The public honors the office of President and resents anything that clouds it.

High Court to Rule On FBI File Secrecy

The Supreme Court decided yesterday to review a lower court ruling that the FBI may not be forced to reveal confidential records in open court.

The case arose when George B. McSwain, FBI chief in Chicago, refused a Federal court order to produce FBI records on Roger (The Terrible) Touhy, a gangster of Prohibition days. Touhy was seeking release from jail where he is serving a kidnaping term.

McSwain said that a 1939 Justice Department order required certain FBI matters be kept private. He told the court that if the papers were made public it was likely that "at least one man, and possibly more, would lose their lives."

The Supreme Court yesterday also took these actions:

1. Agreed to consider a fourth case testing constitutionality of the Government's employe loyalty program. This case, involving the International Workers Order, Inc., will be argued this week after those of Dorothy Bailey, discharged Government worker, and two other organizations. The IWO is contesting its listing on the Attorney General's subversive list.

2. Agreed to consider a Los Angeles case on whether individuals may be sued for damages under the 1871 Federal civil rights act. Members of a Democratic club sued other persons who broke up a meeting favorable to the Marshall Plan. Lower courts have given conflicting rulings on such suits.

3. Agreed to rule on constitutionality of Maryland's franchise tax on railroads, levied on their receipts in that state related to track-miles in Maryland. The cases were brought by the Western Maryland Railway Co. and the Canton Railroad Co., operating a Baltimore marine terminal.

4. Refused to rule on a Pennsylvania license fee imposed on television sets used in places licensed to sell liquor. The restaurant owner contended the tax amounted to State regulation of TV. Another case, testing Pennsylvania's right to censor TV movies, is expected to reach the Supreme Court later on.

5. Refused to decide whether Pioneer News Service, a St. Louis bookie information service, was legally deprived of phone service by Missouri officials. The phones at this point are in service and Pioneer's attorney, Morris Shenker, said yesterday he will seek a Federal court injunction to keep them in after yesterday's high court action.

6. Agreed to review two decisions that the Government must make good for pay increases ordered by the Government after it seized a coal mine and a trucking firm during the war. The Justice Department sought the review because it contended "scores of millions of dollars" might have to be paid out if such liability during Government operation were held valid.

7. Refused to review a lower court ruling holding valid Pittsburgh's Urban Development Act under which the city took slum properties by its eminent domain powers.

8. Refused to consider a refusal by the Grand Rapids, Ohio, school board to permit use of a high school auditorium for religious services by Jehovah Witnesses.

9. Agreed to consider a Louisiana case in which an employer ordered to reinstate discharged workers sought to deduct from their back pay the amount of State unemployment compensation which the workers received.

D. C. Wins Tax Suit From Maine Resident

The District won a tax victory yesterday in the Supreme Court involving a lawyer who maintains a home and legal residence in Maine.

He is Henry F. Butler, who claimed exemption from District income taxes for 1942-45. The Court of Appeals last spring ruled that his legal residence in Maine was not enough to exempt his here.

Yesterday the Supreme Court turned down Butler's appeal from the lower court ruling.

Walter Lippmann has gone to Europe. His column, "Today and Tomorrow," will be resumed regularly upon his return in December.

Cotton Outlook Declines Again; Short of Needs

This year's cotton crop will total only 9,869,000 bales, the Crop Reporting Board of the Agriculture Department estimated yesterday.

This is one of the smallest crops in the last 50 years, Department figures show, harvests having been smaller in only eight years since 1900.

The crop will not be enough to supply domestic needs and foreign demand without digging deep into the Nation's reserves. Many cotton experts expect rigid restrictions on exports in order to retain enough cotton for domestic demand.

Chief among the factors resulting in the drop, is the Anderson cotton acreage law passed a year ago. Many farmers were allotted acreage in the law, who had not planted cotton for several years. Other cotton growers were cut as much as 75 percent of their acreage.

Virginia cotton production, yesterday's report showed, dropped from 20,000 bales in 1949 to only 9000. Texas, which a year ago was the biggest producer, will harvest only 2,775,000 bales this year compared with 2,040,000 bales in 1949.

Another factor in the small crop was the drop in yield. A year ago the average yield was 284 pounds per acre, ranging from 649 pounds per acre in Arizona to 153 in Florida. This year the average production was only 257 pounds per acre, due largely to the bigger cuts being ordered in the high production States.

Supreme Court Refuses to Act In 5 Cases Involving Negroes

cases are rejected on points of law not connected with the broader issues which one side or the other attempts to raise and such may have been the case in all those turned down yesterday.

Senator Taylor argued that his constitutional rights had been violated by local police who arrested him after a scuffle at the church door. But city officials said segregation had nothing to do with it, that the case was simply "assault and battery."

In his Pocatello, Idaho, home yesterday, Taylor told the United Press that he wasn't going "down there to serve his sentence of 180 days at hard labor and to pay a fine of $50. He probably can't be extradited to Alabama on a misdemeanor although Birmingham Police Commissioner Eugene Connor said "we are going to send and get him, wherever he is, at once."

The Maryland University case is related to the graduate school segregation rulings by the Court last June, though it turns on a separate point. The Maryland state court ruled that Miss McCready must be admitted to the State school because the Supreme Court in a 1938 case said a state must provide equal facilities within its borders for Negroes and whites.

Maryland University officials argued that equal educational opportunity was offered the girl by the state when it agreed to pay her expenses to attend Meharry Medical College at Nashville, Tenn., a Negro institution. The state's highest court disagreed and that disagreement now stands, since the Supreme Court yesterday decided not to review the case.

Thus the constitutionality of the regional compact, entered into by the Southern States to provide such out-of-State Negro education, remains in doubt. Another case will have to be brought before the court to test it at a later date.

Meanwhile, the girl will have to be admitted to the University of Maryland's nursing school in Baltimore.

This is only one of six cases involving Negroes seeking admission to the State university. Similar cases in the courts involve the school of engineering, the college of arts and sciences and the department of home economics at College Park (an all-white campus up to now) and the pharmacy and dentistry schools in Baltimore. Negroes have been admitted for some time to mixed classes at the law school in Baltimore.

Justice Felix Frankfurter yesterday handed down a one-page memorandum on the denial of review in a Pennsylvania case. Although the case had nothing to do with any segregation issue, Frankfurter's explanation of what should—and should not—be read into a refusal to consider a case bears on the racial matters as well.

Frankfurter said in part that "by denying leave for review here of a lower court decision, this Court lends no support to the decision of the lower court and, obviously, it does not imply approval of anything that may have been said by the lower court in support of its decision."

SENATOR GLEN H. TAYLOR
. . . His appeal not considered

He explained that the denial by the high court meant only that "as a matter of 'sound judicial discretion' fewer than four members of the Court deemed it desirable to review a decision of the lower court."

Negro Law Students Lose Equality Case

GREENSBORO, N. C., Oct. 9 (U.P.).—Federal Judge Johnson J. Hayes ruled today that North Carolina offers Negro law students equal educational facilities and said he would not order the University of North Carolina to admit four Negroes to its law school.

Hayes made the ruling in Middle District Federal Court here. The order made North Carolina the first Southern State to win such a ruling.

The suit was brought by students at North Carolina College in Durham. They contended the Negro college's law school was not equal to that at the university and demanded entrance to the university at Chapel Hill.

12 noon—Ambassador Nabuco of Brazil.

Wet Weather Fouls Maryland Land Week Opening but Anne Arundel Tours Draw Crowd

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Wet weather fouled up the opening of Maryland Farm Week yesterday, muddying the roads and making demonstrations of the use of heavy soil conservation machinery almost impossible.

Unless conditions change early today, part of today's programs in several counties will be postponed for several days, although officials last night said they would go ahead with the rest of the plans.

Prince Georges County leaders were planning last night to postpone a demonstration of how to build a diversion terrace on the Alfred Matson farm near Upper Marlboro. County Agent Stanley Day of Anne Arundel said a "face lifting" program, planned for today at the Freezer Locker Plant on Defense Highway near Annapolis, would take place later. It called for grading, deep tillage, liming, fertilizing, seeding and landscaping, all difficult in wet soil.

Yesterday's most successful program was carried out in Anne Arundel, where two large tours with school children were conducted.

The program started at the Statehouse at Annapolis, where the winners in a county-wide essay contest were announced. With 113 entrants, two of the three prizes were won by sisters. Participating were the children of both private and parochial elementary and high schools.

The winners in the junior high school class were Charlotte Martin of St. Mary's Junior High and Norma Johnston of Bates Junior High School. The winner in the elementary school entries was Charlotte's sister, Beatrice Martin, of St. Mary's school.

The awards were made by David H. Wallace, chairman of the Maryland Board of Natural Resources, acting for Governor William Preston Lane, jr.

After the ceremonies at the Statehouse, the essay contestants, numbering about 130, were taken for a tour of the Sandy Point State Park, where modern forestry practices were shown and explained by State Forester Joseph Taylor.

Another group of more than 250 school children toured six Anne Arundel County farms where the latest in soil, moisture and forest conservation methods is practiced. Among the farms visited were two operated by the State of Maryland House of Correction at Jessups and the Crownsville State Hospital.

Another successful program was held in Prince Georges County, where the day was assigned to both farm and city women. Home Demonstration Agent Miss Ethel Regan, with the assistance of the County Homemakers clubs, showed how to utilize locally grown farm products through canning, preserving, etc.

A similar program is scheduled for today in Baltimore County, culminating in a tour of outstanding grassland farms in the county and historic farms near Towson. Yesterday Baltimore County had a demonstration of wildlife protection, and woodland marking and cutting.

Today another forestry program, that is expected to attract attention from all parts of the State, will take place near Union Chapel on the Walkersville-Libertytown road in Frederick County. Two types of tree-planting machines will be demonstrated, with C. E. Lovell of the State Forest and Park Service in charge.

Guided Missile May Broadcast

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Army yesterday announced a greatly stepped-up program for waging psychological warfare, including plans for guided missiles which carry loud speakers.

Brig. Gen. Robert A. McClure, newly appointed chief of psychological warfare, told reporters his outfit will be given independent status in the Department of Army staff and "go into everything that undermines enemy morale and reduces his will to resist."

While conceding the idea might sound "Buck Rogerish," McClure drew a picture of guided missiles in the future being launched against enemy interior cities and carrying propaganda rather than explosives.

They could circle over the cities, dropping leaflets and broadcasting messages to the enemy population, said the general.

The new program now definitely in view will go far beyond "just dropping leaflets" from airplanes and shouting at cut-off enemy troops through "hog-callers" to surrender, as in World War II, McClure explained.

The new psychological warfare division will set up its own schools and training procedures, and send task forces into the field which will have their own intelligence and evaluation sections. The latter will not duplicate those of other agencies, the general said.

He cited the case of a captured North Korean lieutenant colonel, who was questioned by combat intelligence officers about weapons and troop strengths.

"We weren't a bit interested in those things," McClure went on. "What we wanted was background, why he became a Communist. What the people were thinking. How the commissars worked on them. Even gossip helps us far more than statistics."

McClure's group, recently created, now is a section of the G-3 division of the Army General Staff. It will soon be given the status of a division of the Army Special Staff, he said. Policy will be worked out with officials of the Navy and Air Force in a joint group headed up in the State Department.

The Air Force enlisted six and the Army three men.

Ray is president of the Standard Federal Savings and Loan Association of Detroit and has been in the business since 1916. He is a past president of the Michigan Savings and Loan League and has served as a member of the U. S. League's executive committee.

Ben H. Hazen of Portland, Oreg., has been nominated to succeed Ray as vice president of the U. S. League.

The U. S. League is the nationwide trade organization for 3700 member institutions with assets of more than 15 billion dollars. Nearly all Washington savings associations are members.

Also, the bankers heard Dr. Charles C. Tansill, professor at Georgetown University Graduate School, report on what's behind the situation in Korea. Hugh K. Chicago Grain

CHICAGO, Oct. 9 (AP).—The grain market dragged through a dull session to a mixed close today.

Only once did the market show any spark of life—right at the opening, when soybeans jumped as much as 3 cents on heavy buying by one commission house. The gain was nearly all lost until the closing minutes, when beans rallied slightly, without vigor.

The other cereals did practically nothing, all winding up with gains or losses of less than a cent. Lard, however, found the going rugged, selling off in sympathy with an early slump in cotton oil.

Soviets Agree To Negotiate Grain Treaty

GENEVA, Oct. 9 (AP).—The Soviet Union today agreed to negotiate a large-scale multilateral treaty for the supply of Russian grain to West European countries.

Gunnar Myrdal, of Sweden, executive secretary of the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe, said Russia would attend a conference opening here November 14, at which details are to be worked out.

N. I. Korioukine, Soviet charge d'affaires in Bern, told Myrdal of Russia's readiness to negotiate an agreement for the supply of large quantities of wheat, rye, corn, barley and oats to Europe's principal importers, including France, Italy, Norway, Sweden and the United Kingdom.

Myrdal said Poland might also take part in the conference as a supplier of grain. Western Germany would participate as a purchaser. The grain agreement was originally proposed by Myrdal in November, 1949, in an effort to break the postwar deadlock in trade between East and West Europe. Myrdal toured the major European capitals, including Moscow, during the summer and discussed his proposals with top officials.

His plan originally provided for the supply of Russian grain in return for Western products not subject to export controls. During subsequent negotiations, the stipulation of return deliveries of Western goods was dropped, and Western countries are now expected to negotiate on a basis of cash payment for Russian deliveries.

The conference will deal mainly with the amounts of grain to be supplied by the east European countries, the prices to be paid by the West and delivery dates.

Myrdal estimated the West would contract for the purchase of at least 600,000 tons of wheat, 500,000 tons of rye and about three-million tons of corn, barley and oats.

4 U. S. Fliers Reported Held By Reds in '47

FRANKFURT, Germany, Oct 9 (U.P.).—Four U. S. Air Force officers who made a forced landing in Russia in 1945 after an air raid on Japan were still held in a Soviet prisoner-of-war camp near Kiev as late as 1947, a refugee Hungarian army lieutenant said in a sworn statement today.

The Hungarian, whose name was withheld by United States officials because he has relatives still behind the Iron Curtain, said the four United States fliers were in the Kiev camp when he was imprisoned late in 1947. He was released in 1948.

The report on their presence in a Soviet prison camp first came to light in a "white book" published in the Hungarian language by exiled Hungarians. The document called upon the Western powers to demand an accounting from Moscow for 219,000 missing Hungarians.

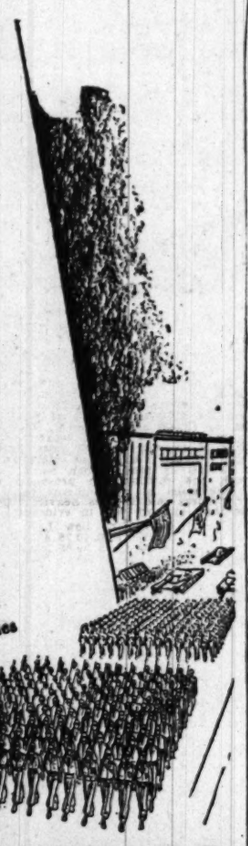

The lieutenant said, "interesting was the fact that in this camp were eight Spanish officers, including the son of the Spanish defense minister, as well as four American Air Force officers who, as allies, made a forced landing with their damaged plane on Soviet territory after a raid on Japan in 1945."

One On the Aisle

The Curious Savage Is Certainly Curious

By Richard L. Coe

THE CLOSEST WORD I can find to describe the Gayety's new comedy is that it's a whatsis.

Lillian Gish is the star of this comedy by John Patrick, and some idea of the state of mind it evokes in an audience is illustrated by a theater-wise friend of mine who asked me, quite seriously, during the intermission, how I was enjoying Helen Hayes.

Patrick calls his comedy (and it's something more than a comedy, besides being something of a farce) "The Curious Savage." The Savage is a Mrs. Savage, Miss Gish, who has been committed to an asylum by her stepchildren because approaching old age, she's been doing things she should have done when she was young: things like backing a play with her millions so she can have the thrill of acting; taking a teddy bear with her everywhere she goes and in general behaving as would a young lady who would be the delight of the society columns.

Shattering her step-daughter and her brothers (the one a Senator, the other a judge) is the fact that Mrs. Savage also has turned some of the family holdings into cash, which she appears to have secreted somewhere.

The action takes place in the asylum, a place of escape which the playwright is inclined to view as nothing less than an earthly paradise, somewhat in the manner of Elwood Dowd and his "Harvey." This would be all very well were it not for the challenge he sets himself.

For in endeavoring to show us how much happier than the sane are the insane, Patrick has to give us a lovable group, three ladies and two men, whose actions and remarks he wishes us, since this is a comedy, to consider funny. However, insanity is not funny and despite how much both playwright and director brought laughter from their first nighters, neither has made the trick quite palatable.

This observation does not hold, of course, for Mrs. Savage and she is an interesting idea, both as conceived and as etched by Miss Gish. The head of the asylum belatedly recognizes that Mrs. Savage is indeed quite sane and his chief nurse connives to get the lady from her family with her cash intact. Miss Gish, who only took over the role Saturday night in Boston, makes a real person of this lady, purple hair, whimsey and all.

The reaction of the Gayety audience was as curious as the play itself, for generally at the fall of the curtain there is a brisk dash for the exits; last night, for what to me seemed a curious reason, 90 percent of the house remained seated, some applauding, others, you could honestly say, dazed.

The cast had something to do with this. Besides Miss Gish, Gladys Henson, Hugh Reilly, Isobel Elsom, Mae Cooper and Robert Emhardt, who played the daft ones, seemed to have caught the appeal inherent in Patrick's script. The audience was able to laugh with them, not just at them, yet also to sympathize. They were, however, also laughing at some pretty stale jokes, more loudly than any at political jibes of a very weak nature which Washington, no matter how frenquently it hears them, always seems to consider the height of humor.

For all the relaxed abandon of the first-nighters, however, I fear "The Curious Savage" is not much of a play. It is a try at something different, for which it does deserve some approbation, but as it stands now it's a whoozey shambles and you're always fully conscious of the fact that it's only makebelieve.

And for what Patrick is trying to do ("There's method in his madness," one character says) this consciousness is fatal. In such plays as "Harvey" and "Arsenic and Old Lace," to which this has certain parallels, one could forget one was in a theater. One believed and this, no matter how skilled his players, Mr. Patrick is unable to make us do. That is the fatal weakness of his bizarre little comedy.

THE THEATER GUILD'S return to Washington at the Gayety last night was, nonetheless, an event... With Lawrence Langner, co-director of the Guild on hand, the raising of the curtain for another subscription season, after a shameful hiatus, means much to Washington... For no matter what one may think of the Guild's choices for production, it remains the most active, as well as the oldest, production group of the American theaten.. For its banner to again be flying in the Capital of the United States is an event of genuine importance.

DR. EDWIN KESSLER, director of the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, will lead the discussion in a series of four "fact" films to be presented by the institute and the Jewish Community Center... First of these will be shown tonight at the Cafriz Auditorium, 1529 16th st., at 8:30...

Maryland Leaps to 8th Place in Football Rankings

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The sweetness and light that prevailed at the Touchdown Club's weekly clambake for the college football coaches of the area yesterday won't disintegrate until Saturday afternoon, at least. That will be the day when Bob Margarita's Georgetown lads will find themselves on the same gridiron with Mr. Jim Tatum's po' li'l Maryland boys who lucked out a narrow 34-7 win over Michigan State.

Mr. Bo Rowland of George Washington U. was also present and reminding the luncheoneers that his lads also have an engagement with Maryland this season. "But next Saturday belongs to Bob Margarita and Georgetown," he said, "and we would not be so selfish as to deprive him of his afternoon with Maryland."

Povich

Rowland was not minimizing his own GW team. "Shucks, we won a game the other day," he said. "Nobody met us with a band but we felt just as good about winning that one as Maryland did about beating Michigan State. If it rains, Georgetown could make it close, but Margarita has to remember that when it rains Tatum has twice as many football players who can get wet as the other fellow."

He assumed, he said, that the luncheon was being given in Maryland's honor, "and befitting a team that has never been beaten in its new stadium."

THE IMPISH Rowland felt sort of hurt, he said, because he couldn't promise anything like the 43,000 crowd that saw Maryland inaugurate its new stadium against Navy a couple of weeks back.

"We'd like to have you all come out to our games," he said, "and one thing GW can always promise—we'll see you all personally if you show up. You won't get lost in the crowd that isn't there."

Nor would GW repeat the mistake that Michigan State made against Maryland, Rowland pointed out. "I understand that out at East Lansing they advertised the Maryland and William and Mary game at $2.60 tops for tickets—with all the other Michigan State home games commanding $5 tops. Tatum's boys got mad when they were put in that cheap bracket.

"We don't want any hard feelings, specially on the part of the Maryland boys when we play them. We're going to charge $10 tops for our game with Maryland so Tatum's kids won't feel hurt. at least Tatum will have to sell 'em on some other idea and can't fire 'em up on the basis we are holding 'em cheaply."

SOMEWHAT SHYLY, Mr. Bob Margarita moved onto the dais and made himself clear on his own attitude about Saturday's game with Maryland. "I understand it's our turn to play Maryland this week," he said, "and I can assure you this much: Georgetown will show up for the game."

His Georgetown team is batting .000 at this point after trying conclusions with Penn State and Tulsa, and Margarita has a proper respect for his task against Maryland. "It wasn't bad enough to read in the papers what Maryland did to mighty Michigan State," he said. "The next day, I had to listen to what my scouts at East Lansing had to tell me about Tatum's team."

In one spot, at least, he was going into the Maryland game well-equipped, said Margarita. "From all I have learned, the most important thing to take into a game against Tatum's team is a hustling safety man. Well, we have one in Tommy Hardiman. It shapes up like a rough afternoon for me, but maybe I should console myself by thinking of what a rough day Hardiman is facing against those guys."

PRESIDENT JIM MAGNER of the Touchdown Club, presently introduced his old North Carolina U. teammate, Tatum, with the thundering aside, to wit: "And I picked Maryland to knock off Michigan State, you know."

Tatum acknowledged the introduction, with a word to Magner as well. "In the future, Jim, he said, I wish you'd tell me beforehand when we are going to win a big game, because sometimes I have my doubts about it, and start worrying."

"It's been fun, beating Michigan State, and I hope you all are enjoying it as much as I am," said Tatum. "But I hope you didn't celebrate as much as I did. At an early hour this morning, I drew the conclusion that I over-celebrated."

Tatum had a nice word for all of his lads at East Lansing. "But I want to pay particular compliment to our good tackle, Chet Gierula. He took the lead for us, and fired the rest of our kids up all afternoon. I don't know who bloodied Gierula's nose at Michigan State last year, but it paid off for us last Saturday."

For Scouting Spartans

Maryland's Bill Meek Named Coach of Week

Bill Meek, backfield coach of the University of Maryland, is The Washington Post's coach of the week.

The 29-year-old former Tennessee quarterback did such a first rate job of scouting Michigan State the Terps knew almost as much about the Spartans as the State players knew about themselves.

BILL MEEK

Michigan State was no stranger to Meek. He had scouted them twice last year, when Maryland lost, 14-7. This year he saw them play two more times—against Oregon State and Michigan. "Against Michigan, they were the best football team I've seen in years," Meek said.

Meek noted that the Spartans, who employ five different offenses, seldom ran a play to the left side of the line. With this information, Coach Jim Tatum and his assistants worked out a defense designed to combat the attack that the Spartans would hurl at the right side of the line.

Meek's information was right on the button. Pictures of the game showed the Spartans ran only four plays to the left side all day. They were smeared each time.

Meek's scouting reports cover practically every thing from the price of tickets to the location of concession stands. Last year, scouting Boston University for Maryland, he noted that the field at Boston's Fenway Park was slightly lower at one end than at the other. Anxious to be prepared for every little eventuality, Tatum had his players scrimmage running up hill to get accustomed to the situation they would face in the ball game. It turned out that the Terps scored their winning touchdown on the uphill part of the field.

Meek, who quarterbacked Tennessee in the Sugar Bowl twice, was head coach of the 1945 Fort Benning, Ga., Doughboys. His team split two games with Tatum's Jacksonville Naval Air Station team. Tatum's Sailors won the opener, 33-7, but Coach Meek placed himself in the backfield for the second game four weeks later and the Soldiers won, 14-7.

"Bill's scouting report was fine, but I also want to give credit to the other assistant coaches," Tatum said last night. "Jack Hennemier and Denver Crawford had our line fired up as high as any that I have ever seen. It was a great team victory and everybody, players and coaches, did a great job."

Grim Hoyas Get Ready For Terps (They Hope)

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

There's only one way to describe the atmosphere out Georgetown way, it's grim.

Coach Bob Margarita and his assistants won't even waste time telling you about how superior this Maryland team they meet here Saturday is to their own.

With Margarita at the projector yesterday, they just sat for hours incessantly running and re-running the movies of Saturday's Tulsa game. Actually breaking down the time, they'll have scarcely more than 10 hours with the squad to try to correct the mistakes that would be even more fatal against the team ranked eighth nationally in the AP poll.

Georgetown has absorbed two decisive defeats in losing to Penn State, 34-14, and Tulsa, 21-7. In both games, the victors gained ground freely against what appears to be a weak defensive line. It isn't difficult to predict what Maryland's strong forward wall will do to it. It's equally easy to visualize Georgetown's running attack being stopped cold by Ray Krouse, Chet Gierula, Bobby Ward and Co.

For the first time since he's been at Georgetown, Line Coach Bill Battles wasn't with the team for the Tulsa game. Battles was at East Lansing scouting Maryland in its tremendous victory over Michigan State. If he brought back any ideas about combatting Maryland's great lines, he's keeping them to himself.

Rain washed out a scheduled light drill on the Hilltop yesterday and Margarita contented himself by holding a squad meeting last night.

Margarita wasn't smiling when he said he was "hopeful" about his team's showing. "There's always hope," was the way he put it.

A more pessimistic visitor meanwhile was checking the biggest previous score in Georgetown's football history. Turned out it was in 1905, when the Carlisle Indians walloped the Hoyas, 76-0. Navy administered a sound thumping, too, 70-4, in 1890.

In the modern era, Georgetown's worst defeat on the scoreboard was Boston College's 47-0 victory in 1942. Last year Fordham won, 42-0, and Maryland won, 33-7.

Georgetown piled on a couple of scores itself, beating St. Louis University, 90-0, in 1915 and St. John's of Brooklyn in 1920, 80-0. Chances are the Hoyas won't approach either of these marks against Maryland, come Saturday.

Wallace KO's Green in 2d

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

Hard - punching Heavyweight Coley Wallace of New York City gained a technical knockout over the District's Joe Green last night after 46 seconds of the second round of their scheduled eight-round fight at Turner's Arena. It was the fifteenth straight win for Wallace and his seventh straight via the knockout route.

Piling jab upon jab, Wallace took the initiative from the start. He had Green in trouble in the first and staggered him early in the second. The local boy fought gamely but didn't have a look-in. Green landed only three ineffective blows during the fight. After a series of fierce rights to the head, Referee Marty Gallagher stopped the bout with Green out on his feet.

In another eight rounder Marshall Clayton, of New Orleans, 1948 all-Army lightweight champ, won an unanimous decision from Sam Kelsey of Washington, in what turned out the best fight of the night.

Kelsey had Clayton's face bloodflecked in the third and almost put him away in the seventh with a fierce onslaught of short punches.

Clayton had tremendous power behind his swings, however, and meted out severe punishment to Kelsey when they connected. Counter-punching cleverly, he kept the initiative and got the nod. It was Clayton's sixteenth win in 17 pro fights.

Featherweights Pat Thomas of Washington and Billy Liggett of New York fought a lackadaisical eight-rounder that ended in a draw. Neither showed much fight and the fans greeted the effort with a bumper crop of razzberries. Liggett substituted for Aponte Torres of Puerto Rico in a last-minute switch.

In a five-rounder, Connie Wilkins received a cut left eye but scored a technical knockout over Chink Williams in 1:02 of the fourth round.

Clarence Hinnant, 146½, took a unanimous decision from Frank Ball, 145, in the four-round opener.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9 (AP).—Helen Traubel, blonde Metropolitan Opera star, said tonight she has bought a part interest in the St. Louis Browns baseball club, "mostly to satisfy a sentimental urge."

She wouldn't reveal the size of her investment but said, "It is a nice chunk."

Gilmer Looks Like No. 1 Quarterback

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The Redskins aren't sure when they'll win another football game this season, but there are two other things they are certain about:

1. They won't lose again for at least two weeks because they don't play again until then.

2. Harry Gilmer has finally become a good T-formation quarterback.

The expanded 13-team National Football League necessitates one team sitting it out each week. Next Sunday is the Redskins' day to rest. They'll be back at Griffith Stadium Sunday a week against the Chicago Cardinals.

And when they do go out and try to snap their three-game losing streak, Alabama Boy Gilmer will probably be the varsity quarterback regardless of the condition of Sammy Baugh's pitching arm, which should be fully mended by then.

Gilmer went the distance at quarterback Suday in the 21-17 loss to the unbeaten New York Giants and nothing he did had anything to do with the eyelash defeat.

Matter of fact, Harry was a top-flight field general. It was really his first big chance in the slot and he passed it with flying colors. Heretofore, he's shared the job with Baugh, but from now on in it's pretty safe to assume that it'll be Gilmer who'll be in the driver's seat.

Coach Herman Ball said he was "elated over Harry's play. He finally appears to be over the hump and has made the grade. It's been a long, tough haul for Harry, but I think he's got the touch now."

"Harry still has a few things to learn about play-calling," Ball added, "but on the basis of his performance against the Giants, he'll be playing more often than he did."

Gilmer's play-calling on the Redskins' first touchdown drive was perfect.

It was one of the rare times in the last few years the opposition actually didn't know what to expect from the Redskins. It was good to see and there are many, many football fans in town who undoubtedly would like to see more of it—from Gilmer.

Where to Buy Maryland-Hoyas Game Tickets

In case you're wondering why the Maryland-Georgetown game Saturday will be played at Griffith Stadium instead of beautiful new Byrd Stadium, the reason is that it's Georgetown's home game.

This means that some 9000 Maryland students will have to pay full price for their tickets. Georgetown students did it last year at College Park. With the Hoya student body about 3000, Georgetown's Athletic Association figures to make a sizable profit on the switch.

Tickets for the game are priced at $2.50 and $3.50. They are on sale at The Fairway, 1328 G st. nw.; Champion Sports, Inc., 816 13th st. nw.; A.A.A., 17th and Pennsylvania ave. nw.; Bethesda Sports, Center and Georgetown University.

Deady Elected Captain Of Hoya Track Team

Joe Deady, one of the top half-milers in the country, yesterday was elected captain of the Georgetown University track team.

Deady, 20-year-old native of Plainfield, N. J., was the anchor man on the Hoyas' 2-mile relay team that cracked three indoor meet records last season and won the National AAU, I.C. 4-A and Penn Relay championships.

May Tone Down Schedule

Northwestern's Convincing Win Convinces Navy It's Playing in Too Tough a League

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 9 (AP).—Northwestern's football team may have done Navy a favor by winning so decisively Saturday.

Directors of Navy football showed signs of realizing they can't continue to play a man-sized schedule with boys.

Rip Miller

For the first time in the dismal postwar years there were no "ifs, ands or buts." Athletic officials at the Academy right down the line were resigned to have little to cheer about for another year.

It wasn't so much the 22-0 licking dished out by the Northwestern team but the very obvious fact that Navy didn't have a chance after the first few minutes. The Middies got up only one threat the entire game and the rest of the time Northwestern tore through them almost at will.

It took the dismal showing to convince Navy officials, even though they'd won only five games in four previous seasons, that they lacked the firepower for week after week of big battles.

"I'll take all the blame, it's my fault," volunteered Rip Miller. As assistant athletic director, Miller's main job is to line up football players and get them into the Academy.

Miller admitted "We have only three or four real good players and that isn't enough."

Coach Eddie Erdelatz, who was hired this season to replace George Sauer, was confounded and confused. He'd said he was satisfied with the Navy material but that was before he had seen it against outside opposition.

"I'll be lucky if we can field a team for next Saturday's game," Erdelatz said worriedly.

Navy almost ran out of backs before the Northwestern game was over. Four of them, Art Sundry, Frankie Hauff, Jack Wilner and Frank Adorney, were hurt. Three other first stringers, Ends Tom Bakke and Bob McDonald and Back Vic Vine, were so banged up before they couldn't even start.

Just which tack the Navy will take now after trying three coaches in four seasons is problematical.

Miller went around mumbling about "really going after players." Capt. Howard Caldwell observed that "next Saturday it's Princeton and that's more in our league."

Did that mean Navy would tone down its schedule which now includes the best representatives from all sections of the country?

"Could be, could be," said Captain Caldwell thoughtfully.

Army Takes First, SMU Second; Irish Crash to 10th

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Maryland vaulted into eighth place among the Nation's college football teams today as a result of its smashing 34-7 victory over Michigan State, last week's second ranking team.

Unbeaten Army, which trampled Penn State, replaced Notre Dame as the top team in the weekly Associated Press poll. The Irish, their long victory streak ended by Purdue, tumbled to tenth place, two spots below Maryland.

The Terps, who have plastered Navy and Michigan State following their 27-7 upset by Georgia in the season's opener, received eight first-place votes. Last week Maryland was ranked fifteenth.

None of the teams remaining on Maryland's schedule is ranked in the first 20. The Maryland defeat not only ended Michigan State's unbeaten streak, but sent them from second place to twentieth.

Purdue's upset of the Fighting Irish, 28-14, shook up the football ratings like an earthquake.

When the debris had cleared away, the pigskin experts from coast to coast had to start from scratch in figuring their top 10 teams. Putting Notre Dame at No. 1, 2 or 3 had been a must for so long. Today the Irish received only one first-place nomination.

Notre Dame has finished no lower than ninth since 1941 and almost always has been 'way up during the season.

Army, with an unbeaten string of 22 games, vaulted from fourth to first, receiving 2,101 points by a national panel of 241 sports writers and sportscasters. They were named first on 115 ballots.

Southern Methodist's air-minded Mustangs moved into second place followed by: (3) Oklahoma, (4) Texas, (5) Kentucky, (6) Stanford, (7) California, (8) Maryland, (9) Purdue, and (10) Notre Dame.

SMU garnered 53 first-place ballots and a total of 1990 to give Army a tussle for top rating. Oklahoma was named first 29 times and received 1990 points. Texas also went over the 1000 mark with 1212 points and nine first placers.

A week ago the first 10 teams were the following: (1) Notre Dame, (2) Michigan State, (3) Southern Methodist, (4) Army, (5) Oklahoma, (6) Kentucky, (7) Texas, (8) Stanford, (9) California, and (10) Washington.

Bill Bennings Says:

DEAR FOLKS: AT BOWIE

This track didn't give up its early Spring dates without an argument, but it finally gave in. Now, instead of showing its usualy hefty profit, Bowie is about to find itself in the red on the meeting, hoping to get out or get even with the late November-early December session Everybody concerned with Maryland racing believes something must be done. Racing Commissioner Frank Small, jr. believes that the purse money should be kept high to insure top flight sport. He is willing to ask for a change in the racing laws with part of the State's usual "take" going toward the purse money. As a starter he suggests that the State's half of the breakage go into the pot for horsemen. I believe everybody will second the motion. See you on the rail—BILL.

Ida C. 2d; MacPhail's Choice Fails

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

BOWIE, Oct. 9.—After five favorites had won in the first six races, Larry MacPhail's Invariant proved a dud in the featured Dunblane Purse.

She turne din a dull fourth-place effort while Arthur Newmeyer's Flying Mane fought her way to a neck decision over O. L. Nyberg's Ida C. In third place came Mrs. T. A. Randolph's Mahoon.

Many fans believed that Invariant simply did not like them. However, the press box concensus was that Jockey Ira Hanford did not like them. He took the choice into the clubhouse turn in good position and then allowed her to go past the center of the race track, losing five or more lengths. She never recovered any of the ground.

With the favorite thus eliminated, the race turned out to be a two-horse affair. Ida C set the pace and Flying Mane always was in striking position. When the final test came, Jockey Aubrey Snellings was able to get a little more punch out of Flying Mane than Apprentice Tony Russo could muster in Ida C.

Flying Mane, second in her first start here, paid $9 to win and was clocked in 1:50 for the mile and a sixteenth. Rain fell during most of the program and the track was as sloppy as the bottom of a drained swimming pool.

Apprentice Jockey Augustino Catalano escaped with a bruised right leg when his mount, A. J. Ryan's Molly Flag, fell entering the stretch in the eighth race. Both horse and rider were covered with mud. J. G. Nathan's Hair Stylist at $17.60, the day's longest mutuel, was the winner.

GW Going After 3d in Row Friday

George Washington's Colonials shoot for their third straight Southern Conference victory when they meet Virginia Tech Friday night at Griffith Stadium.

It's Friday the thirteenth, by the way, and Coach Bo Rowland is warning his Colonials that the Gobblers will get them if they don't watch out.

Rowland has always maintained that Virginia Tech has some of the best player material in the conference. For some reason, however, it has never been able to click.

Bo has cautioned his boys to keep an eye on Sterling Wingo, one of the fastest backs in the South, Bud Fisher, a sharp passing T formation quarterback, and Ron Casto, clever pass catching end. Wingo already has touchdown runs of 78 and 61 yards to his credit this season.

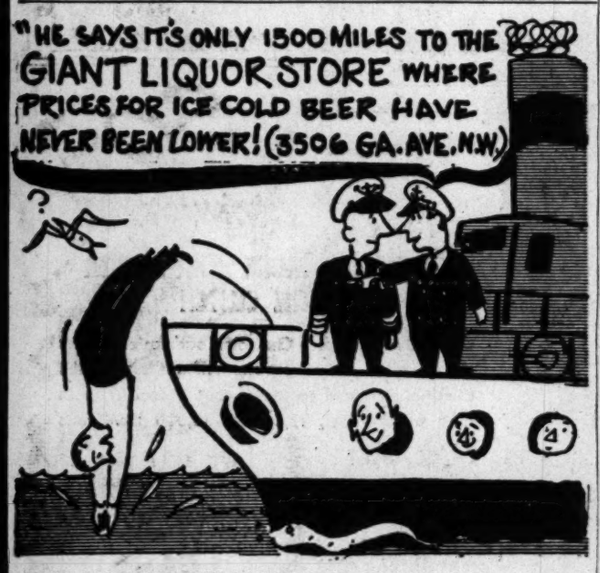

The Gobblers have lost both 1950 games, 61-21, to Quantico, and, 47-6, to Virginia. As a matter of fact, they have won only one game in the past three seasons, and Bob McNeish, their coach over that span, is on thin ice.

G.W. has beaten the Gobblers the last two times they've met, 13-0, two years ago, and 24-14 last year on Al DuGoff's four touchdowns.

The Colonials will be at least two touchdown favorites to keep their conference record unblemished. They lost their nonleague opener to Virginia, 19-0.

If the Colonials come through as expected against the Gobblers Friday, they'll be off to their best start since 1946 when they won their first four games before losing their last three.

GROOM IT WITH KREML

"TO AVOID THAT GREASY LOOK—MAKE HAIR LOOK MORE ABUNDANT"

There's nothing better than Kreml to neatly groom thinning hair or sparse locks. Kreml doesn't look the least bit greasy, sticky or gooey. No dirt-catching film shows through on the scalp. Kreml always keeps hair and scalp looking and feeling so clean. AND SO VERY IMPORTANT—Kreml removes dandruff flakes (more noticeable with sparse hair); it lubricates a dry scalp, giving it a delightful tingle. Change to Kreml today.

Caps Get Taylor, Big Forward

The Washington Caps will get some help in the height department, where they need it most, when Harry (Trees) Taylor, six foot, six inch, Negro forward from North Carolina College, joins them today.

Taylor was brought in following the release of Harold Hunter, former captain and guard at North Carolina State, Hunter's 5 feet, 10 inches made him too small to play the big-league pro game, Coach Bones McKinney said.

Chisox Expected To Name Richards Manager Today

CHICAGO, Oct. 9 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox may name their 1951 manager tomorrow and it will fool a lot of people if it isn't Seattle Pilot Paul Richards, succeeding John (Red) Corriden.

General Manager Frank Lane today ducked questions on the subject, declaring that no board of directors meeting had been scheduled for tomorrow to pick next season's field boss as previously reported.

However, it was expected that Lane and Vice-President Charles Comiskey would make some sort of an announcement. Richards was tabbed to fly here today from Los Angeles, where his Seattle club wound up its Pacific Coast League season yesterday.

Washington Jets Beat New York

The Washington Jets bounced back before 3541 spectators at Uline Arena last night to defeat the New York Chiefs, 21-19, to win the five-game National Roller Derby series 3-2.

Russ Massro's Chicago Westerners will oppose the Jets at Uline Arena tonight, 8:30 o'clock, in the opening game of an eight-day stand.

Talbert, Brown, Champs

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 9 (AP).—William Talbert of New York City and Tom Brown, jr., of San Francisco won the men's doubles title of the Pan American Tennis Tournament today, defeating Art Larsen and Herbert Flam of California, 6—1, 6—4, 3—6, 4—6, 6—3.

Bowie Schedules Nine Race Cards For Fire Victims

BOWIE, Oct. 9.—L. Ed O'Hara, general manager of the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association, operator of Bowie and Marlboro, announced today that permission had been granted by the Maryland Racing Commission to present nine-race programs on Wednesday and Saturday of this week.

Proceeds from these two addition races will go to horsemen who suffered losses in the recent Marlboro fire. The blaze tok the lives of 23 thoroughbreds stabled at the half-mile track. During the Marlboro meeting two extra races were offered and netted the horsemen approximately $3100.

Boston College Drops Oklahoma, Ole Miss

BOSTON, Oct. 9 (U.P.)—The Boston College Eagles, their wings clipped by Southern football powers on two successive Saturdays, decided today to fly their sights lower.

"We're not deemphasizing or anything like that," said Boston College athletic director John P. Curley. "Our football policy will be unchanged. But it will be a few years at least before we tackle Oklahoma or Mississippi again."

Boston College was beaten 54-0 by Mississippi Saturday. The week before it lost 28-0 to Oklahoma.

"I met Mississippi's athletic director after the game and we decided mutually to call off our tentative date for next year," Curley said.

District Senior Golf At Burning Tree

Spleen Is Removed, Woman Gets Well

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

ROANOKE, Va., Oct. 9.—The medical case history of how an Alexandria, Va., mother was saved from almost certain death by "heroic surgery" was reported here today.

The patient, near death in October, 1949, due to rapid destruction of her red blood cells following Caesarian birth of her fifth child, rallied promptly after unprecedented removal of her spleen, blood-forming organ of the body, her doctor reported.

Dr. William M. Delaney, of Alexandria, now a lieutenant commander at the Bethesda, Md., Naval Hospital, reported the case at a scientific session of the 103d annual meeting of the Medical Society of Virginia here.

Although such acute and usually fatal anemias are relatively rare, each doctor in his lifetime of practice runs across at least one such case, he said. However, he added, a "careful review of the (medical) literature" failed to disclose any instances of spleen surgery to stop the deadly blood destruction.

Transfusions No Help

The physician said his patient developed the anemia with marked bleeding about one month before her confinement date for her fifth child. Blood transfusions seemed only to aggravate the condition, he said.

Because of the bleeding, the Caesarian operation, or surgical delivery of the child, was performed promptly in Alexandria Hospital. The baby was healthy, but the mother grew steadily worse.

It was then, he said, that he and his brother, Dr. Martin D. Delaney, also an Alexandria physician, decided to remove the spleen in line with "one school of medical thought that the spleen is the site of origin" of substances which destroy the blood's red cells.

Success of the operation, he added, "well appears to bear out that thought."

The spleen is a ductless organ near the stomach, known to be involved in blood-forming processes. Like the appendix, it can be removed without apparent harm to continued life.

"Occasionally," said Dr. Delaney, in his report, "the spleen is more of a hindrance than a help."

A careful search was made in the Alexandria case for the cause of the red cell destruction, but without success, he said. Only his patient's prompt recovery after the operation indicates that the disorder's cause was connected with the spleen.

At Convention

Lutheran Unit Told of Need For Chaplains

DES MOINES, OCT. 9 (AP).—Pastors who can qualify were urged by the United Lutheran Church in America (ULCA) at its convention today to apply for appointment as chaplains in the armed services.

Dr. Robert H. Gerhart, jr., of Philadelphia, chairman of the ULCA Army and Navy work committee, recommended that synodical officials urge pastors, who can qualify, help the church fill its chaplain quota.

There are 290 ULCA chaplains in the services, Veterans Administration and National Guard at present, Dr. Gerhart said.

In another action, delegates voted to allow a special committee two more years to study a proposal to give ULCA officials ecclesiastical titles. Delegates spoke both for and against such titles in floor debate.

Dr. L. Ralph Tabor of Washington, D. C., president of the ULCA parish and church school board, reported 25 or 30 kindergartens, designed to provide children with Christian training for the two years prior to entering the first grade, already have been established. The program, he said, is being financed by local congregations.

Board members indicated the ULCA probably would confine its emphasis to Christian kindergartens.

Sick Wife Barricaded; Spouse Held

EDGEWATER, Md., Oct. 9 (AP). A 75-year-old waterman has been accused of threatening to shoot police who freed his sick wife from a homemade barricade of chairs.

John W. Franklin said he "would shoot anybody" who came for his wife in their waterfront home at Deale, Patrolman Lloyd M. Smith charged.

Mrs. Franklin was moved from the enclosure of rope-bound chairs last week. An Anne Arundel General Hospital spokesman in Annapolis said today Mrs. Franklin was under treatment for diabetes in "its most severe form." Her condition was "satisfactory."

Police told of the bizarre living room barricade after neighbors helped them persuade Franklin his 64-year-old wife needed hospital care.

Smith and Patrolman Ashley Vick said Franklin had lashed five or six chairs around the plain wooden chair in which Mrs. Franklin sat quietly for days at a time.

Her legs were badly ulcerated. Newspapers were spread on the floor.

Smith said neighbors told of seeing Mrs. Franklin in the chair "off and on for two years."

"He seemed to figure that was the best way to take care of her," Smith said. The ring of chairs would save her from falling. A heavy cord strung across the front provided a headrest.

Vick swore out a warrant charging Franklin with threatening to fire on police.

Capehart Hits 'Exile' of Ward to Kenya

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 9 (AP).—Senator Capehart (R., Ind.) said in a statement here today that Angus Ward "is the second of a list of anti-Communists slated for Soviet-style exile if Communist influence is permitted to continue in our Government."

The Senator referred to former Pennsylvania Governor George H. Earle as "the first victim of this un-American system of purges."

Earle was sent to Samoa after serving as minister to Bulgaria, as naval attache to Turkey and as President Roosevelt's representative on Balkan affairs.

"Now we find Angus Ward, the best-informed source in our Government on communism in the Far East, has been exiled to Kenya, East Africa, where he will hold a minor diplomatic position," Senator Capehart said.

"Ward, who was held prisoner by the Communists during the time they overran Manchuria and China, has said little publicly about his 25 years of experience in or near Communist Russia, but had told too many of his friends about the wrongs of Communism."

In San Diego, Calif., Senator Joseph McCarthy (R., Wis.) also charged that Ward has been "exiled" as an emissary to Kenya.

Senator McCarthy told a news conference that Ward "made the mistake of saying exactly what he thought concerning communism. Because he dislikes the Communists, he holds no high position in the State Department."

Western to Get Flag Honoring Pledge Author

Western High School, founded the year the pledge to the flag was first published, will receive a flag given in honor of the man credited with writing the familiar tribute.

Donated by Margette S. Miller, an historian from Portsmouth, Va., the flag will be presented Thursday at 9 a.m. in the school auditorium.

The award will be the ninth annual presentation to selected schools across the nation in honor of Francis Bellamy, a member of the staff of Youth's Companion. The magazine first published the pledge in 1892, according to Miss Miller.

Authorship of the pledge has been contested for half a century. Some authorities say it was written by James Upham, an editor of Youth's Companion. A decade ago the United States Flag Association appointed a committee of three university professors to investigate rival claims. They unanimously voted Bellamy the honor.

Bellamy's son, David, will participate in Thursday's program. School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning and Board of Education President C. Melvin Sharpe are scheduled as speakers. The flag will be accepted for the students by Richard Hudgins, president of the student council, and for the alumni by Fulton Lewis, jr., class of 1920.

Race Barrier Slightly Eased By Va. Medics

ROANOKE, Va., Oct. 9 (Spl.) The House of Delegates, governing body of the Medical Society of Virginia, today voted unanimously to cooperate with Negro physicians "to the fullest extent now practicable."

Today's action followed close defeat last night of a move to open membership in the State society to practicing Negro physicians of Virginia.

Under the special resolution passed today, the Negro physicians will be invited to attend regularly scheduled scientific sessions of the society "whenever these are held at locations permitting the attendance of mixed racial groups."

It further recommended that each of the 48 constitutent societies which make up the MSV adopt a similar policy, and opened the society's scientific journal, the Virginia Medical Monthly, to articles submitted by members of the Old Dominion Medical Society, the Negroes' own medical organization.

Sunday's measure asking open membership for Negroes failed by a narrow margin to obtain the two thirds vote needed to change the organization's constitution.

The vote was 53 to 30. Had three of the 30 voted with the majority, the measure would have passed. A similar move at the society's 1949 annual meeting, at Old Point Comfort, was defeated by a slightly greater margin.

Today's resolution was introduced by Dr. John T. Hundley of Lynchburg, who later was voted president-elect of the society. He thus, automatically, assumed the presidency next October at the end of the 1951 convention, at Virginia Beach.

Other officers elected today included Dr. George S. Hurt of Roanoke, first vice president; Dr. S. K. Ames of Cape Charles, second vice president, and Dr. W. R. Pretlow of Warrenton, third vice president. Dr. V. W. Archer of Charlottesville was reelected councilor representing Virgnia's Eighth Legislative District, which includes Alexandria and Arlington and Fairfax Counties.

The Federal Diary by Jerry Kluttz

Congress to Be Asked To Repeal or Kill Whitten Job Rider

Congress will be asked to either repeal or amend the Whitten rider when it returns here late next month. The rider forces the Government to place most personnel actions on a temporary basis.

The Administration, meantime, is working out its own personnel program. That program will be presented to Congress with the argument it's better fitted to meet the Government's personnel problems. Civil Service and other Federal officials believe the Whitten rider goes too far; that it isn't necessary to place grade promotions on a temporary basis.

PEOPLE: Seth Richardson, the able chairman of Civil Service's loyalty review board, is under consideration for the job to administer the anti-Communist law recently passed by Congress over the President's veto . . . Dr. Frederick V. Rand, a retired Agriculture employe, has been named executive officer of the Organization of Professional Employes of the Agriculture Department . . . Henry C. Iler, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, is still ill. He's in the Marine Hospital in Baltimore . . . At ECA, Norman S. Paul has been appointed deputy director of the mutual defense assistance staff . . . Steve Spingarn of the White House staff will get a recess appointment to the Federal Trade Commission.

POST OFFICE: Joseph F. Betterley and George W. Trexler have been appointed assistant executive directors of its bureau of facilities. Other appointments: Charles H. Carle, director, division of quarters; John J. McGinness, director, building operations; Leo H. Vullings, director, division of equipment and supplies, and James R. Martin, director, division of budget and administrative services.

ROUND-UP: Representative Gore (D., Tenn.) has asked the Justice Department to investigate charges that the Atomic Energy Commission has violated the Veterans' Preference Act in discharging veterans at its Oak Ridge, Tenn., operations . . . CIO's Government Workers Union soon will start publishing a monthly newspaper for its 30,000 members . . . Civil Service has ruled that Federal employe participation in the Atlantic Union Committee isn't a violation of the Hatch "no politics" Act . . . Albert A. Perry, a Mount Alto Hospital carpenter, has been awarded $50 for an economy suggestion.

JOB NEWS: Civil Service will announce an exam soon to recruit engineering, cartographic and statistical draftsmen at $2450 to $3825 starting salaries . . . Also coming up are tests for cartographic aides, $2450 to $3825, and dental interns at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, $2200 . . . Now open is an exam for librarians and assistants, $2650 to $3100 . . . Only 982 of the 3131 persons who took the economist test were given passing grades . . . An exam will be given soon to recruit electrotypers and stereotypers for the Government Printing Office at $2.66 an hour . . .

DRAFT: It's beginning to make a dent in the Federal service. In August alone, about 5300 Federal workers were called into the military service, the largest number in any month since 1945.

Incidentally, some Federal officials believe the time is near for Uncle Sam to lay down a draft policy for his employes. The President is likely to set up a committee to form such a policy and to carry it out.

LEAVE: Questions galore are still being asked by Federal employes on the leave rider and the comptroller general's decision on it. The important ones already have been answered at least once in this column. However, we'll be glad to answer your leave problem if you put it in writing, enclosing a self-addressed envelope.

Meantime, here's another question of general interest: "I carried over 50 days of annual leave to 1950. How will the leave rider affect me?" (1) You'll be able to carry-over a maximum of 60 days at the end of this year; in other words, you'll have to take 16 of the 26 days you earn during this calendar year by December 31, or else you'll lose it, and (2) you'll have to take the remaining 10 days you will earn this year by next July 1, or else forfeit it.

Thieves Crack Three Safes, Get $2660 in Cash, $500 in Checks

The Washington Post

BUSY WEEKEND—Mrs. Nellie McCombs, manager of the Lady Lee Shop, 1205 F st. nw., holds all yeggs left of combination to safe robbed over weekend. Two other stores whose rear entrances are on same alley also were robbed

It became apparent yesterday that some "Sunday shoppers" had been downtown over the weekend.

Proprietors of three business establishments discovered yesterday morning that yeggs had cracked open their safes and made off with cash totaling $2660, not to mention checks worth about $500.

Entered were the Hahn Shoe Store, 1207 F st. nw.; the Lady Lee Shop, 1205 F st. nw., and the Latchstring Restaurant, 612 12th st. The three places have something else in common: their rear entrances are on the same alley.

Apparently the yeggs climbed to a rooftop by a rear fire escape. They got into the Latchstring Restaurant by forcing open a trap door on the roof of the three-story building. Then they made their way to a second floor office, cracked open the safe and took $2000.

The other places were entered by breaking the locks of barred second floor windows, to which the thieves had access from adjoining rooftops.

A safe in the Lady Lee Shop yielded $660 in cash and $500 worth of checks. When they opened the safe in Hahn's Shoe Store, the thieves found only a small amount of change. They passed up such pittance.

It was certainly the work of professionals, police declared.

Thieves also broke into the Consumers Profit Sharing Co. establishment, 516 2d st. nw., over the weekend, and carted off enough merchandise to stock a store.

The loot, valued at $810, included 168 clocks, 36 pen-and-pencil sets, 60 knife-and-fork sets, 24 cameras, 36 heating pads, 6 electric irons, 6 waffle irons, 3 radios, 12 umbrellas, 12 carving sets and 6 pairs of binoculars.

Man, 'Wife' Held in Cutting And Robbery

Some strange persons are hauled into police headquarters every day, but none stranger than the pair brought in yesterday as suspects in a vicious assault and robbery.

They professed to be husband and wife and had been living together as such at 1316 13th st. nw. but a close inspection of the "wife" revealed a man, Calvin B. Mahoney, a female impersonator. The "husband" was identified as Jerry Cassell, 19.

When arrested, Mahoney was wearing a dress, high-heeled shoes and lipstick, had long hair and spoke in the most feminine of voices.

According to police, he was similarly decked out when he and Cassell attacked Joseph Moore, 40, and Lelia Monroe, 30, both of 27 Logan circle nw., early Sunday morning on 13th st. nw., between O st. and Logan circle.

Police said one of the men slashed Moore in the back with a long-bladed knife. Later, at Freedmen's Hospital, doctors took 32 stitches in Moore's back.

The attackers snatched Miss Monroe's purse, which contained only 50 cents, and her coat, which she was carrying. Then they hailed a passing cab and escaped.

Witnesses gave police the cab number, which they used to track Mahoney and Cassell to the 13th st. address.

Musclemen Net $1150 in Coins In Truck Raid

Thieves who apparently did not lack muscles stole $1150 in coins from a coin machine company truck last night while it was parked in the 1300 block of R st. nw.

The theft occurred about 6 p. m. Within four hours police located a suspect car and picked up two men for questioning.

The cash belonged to the G. B. Macke Co., of 212 H st. nw. James H. Dotson, 32, of 1709 U st. ne., a collection man for the company for the past five years, told police the theft occurred while he was inside a store.

Stolen were two canvas bags, one containing $800 in coins, the other $350 in coins. The coins, mostly nickels and dimes, represented considerable weight, police said.

Cried 'Murder'

'Joke' Costs ICC Lawyer $50 Fine

A Federal attorney who, police said, falsely reported a murder at his home as a "joke," was fined $50 and given a 30-day suspended jail sentence in Arlington County Court yesterday.

Leo W. Cunningham, 56, of 1318 N. Emerson st., Arlington, an attorney for the Interstate Commerce Commission, pleaded guilty to a charge of turning in the false report.

Police got out a warrant for Cunningham's arrest, they said, after he telephoned the police dispatcher from his home early Sunday morning to report a "murder."

Two scout cars and an ambulance were sent to the Cunningham home and "tied up for 20 minutes" before the attorney admitted the telephone call was "a joke," the police report said.

No open testimony in the case was given in court yesterday. Judge Hugh Reid pronounced sentence after a bench conference with Cunningham's attorney, Lester Conley.

Education Board Unit to Study Ban On Sesqui Players

A special Board of Education committee appointed to study the recent banning of a mixed group of Sesquicentennial actors from the stage of the Anacostia High School will hold its first meeting Monday at 11:30 a. m. at the Franklin Administration Building, 13th and K sts. nw.

The committee will determine whether Mrs. Opal Corkery, principal of Anacostia, had the approval of school officials when she refused to let the actors appear. The three-man committee also will draw up a policy to govern future presentations involving mixed groups. Committee members are Dr. James A. Gannon, Woolsey W. Hall and Adelbert W. Lee.

Roosevelt Hotel Fined On Health Dept. Charge

The Roosevelt Hotel, 2101 16th st. nw., was fined $25 in Municipal Court yesterday, after pleading guilty to five violations of health regulations.

Judge Nadine L. Gallagher imposed the fine after hearing testimony that Health Department inspectors found dirty cooking equipment, an ice-box "infested with waterbugs," and decomposed meat at the hotel September 28.

Rising Water Pollution in U.S. Attacked

Problem Reported At Critical Stage; D. C. Now Expanding Sewage Facilities

The increase in water pollution in American watersheds during the past decade has been "alarming," Assistant Surgeon General Mark D. Hollis said ystrdaey.

The U. S. Public Health Service official said stream conditions over wide areas are reaching the "critical stage" and may threaten the expansion of industry which may be needed in the event of a national emergency.

Hollis addressed the opening session of the Federation of Sewage and Industrial Wastes Associations at the Statler Hotel yesterday.

Before the 23d annual meeting opened, Ralph E. Fuhrman, superintendent of the D. C. sewage treatment plant, was elected president of the international organization. More than 600 public and private officials and visitors registered yesterday.

To solve the "more obvious" water pollution problems, American municipalities must spend about 4¼ billion dollars for sewage treatment works in the next 10 years, Hollis declared.

Annual expenditures under this program would be nearly three times the amount spent during 1949, which was a record year for municipal treatment plant investment, the assistant surgeon general went on.

Industry can be reduced in capacity, prevented from expanding or even wiped out for lack of water of sufficient volume and quality, he declared.

In some river basins in this country, we have approached critical conditions between the water quality and the uses to which the water must be put, Hollis reported.

He said "aggressive remedial measures" should be subordinated only to the most urgent national defense needs in the critical areas among the 20,000 significant sources of water pollution in the United States. These are about equally divided between municipalities and industries, he said.

Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, District engineer commissioner, told the officials the District treatment plant is now being enlarged from a daily capacity of 130 million gallons to 175 million.

Constitutional Convention Urged in Md.

The Montgomery County Civic Federation went on record last night in favor of calling a State constitutional convention and urged citizens to vote for it in the November elections.

The federation also went on record as opposed to freezing the number and apportionment of the members of the House of Delegates.

The group approved a measure which would give the Legislature another chance to act on bills vetoed by the Governor after the Legislature adjourns.

Approved also was a proposal, also to be on the ballot, which would give trial judges authority to instruct juries to bring in a verdict of not guilty.

The federation adopted a resolution favoring the fluorination of water by the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission. The step was seen as a possible aid in preventing tooth decay in children. Henry H. Snelling of the citizens association of Section 8, Chevy Chase, opposed the resolution.

Neverson Acquitted In Steamer Shooting

James S. Neverson, 24, of 2633 I st. nw., was acquitted yesterday of charges of assault with a dangerous weapon and assault with intent to kill in the shooting August 12 of Frank L. Jacobs, 28, of 1422 Morse st. ne.

The shooting took place during a near riot aboard the river boat Robert E. Lee. The acquittal was in District Court, and also included a not guilty verdict on a gun-carrying charge.

Two Remaining Founding Sisters at Convent Recall Its Beginnings Here 50 Years Ago

By Arthur Ellis-The Washington Post

Mother Rachel Maresca (left) and Mother Severina di Giovanni kneel in prayer

"We were the two originals, now we're the two remnants."

Two sisters who helped found the Convent of Perpetual Adoration at 1450 V st. nw. 50 years ago Wednesday, said this in retrospect yesterday.

Neither the red brick building nor the nuns seemed to have changed much.

Mother Severina di Giovanni, about to turn 90, and Mother Rachel Maresca, now 77, looked back to the day they arrived in Washington.

"We arrived here at 11 p.m. after docking in New York from Antwerp.

Met by Mrs. Ryan

"Mrs. Thomas F. Ryan, wife of one of the wealthiest contractors in Washington, stepped from her carriage to meet us, just as the gang plank went up. We had planned to spend the night in New York, but she had a telegram from Cardinal Gibbons that he was going to bless our convent the following day. So we headed for Washington that night," they explained.

As Mother Rachel talked on, out came a 50-year-old clipping from the pocket of the other sister.

"Pretty Girls to Begin Perpetual Worship," it headlined, and then described how Mrs. Thomas F. Ryan and her husband had contributed $100,000 to build a convent of "Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament."

Original Furniture Used

The convent stands as it was originally—the sisters say that not a piece of furniture has been added, only a statue of Mary in the polished parlor.

A semicloistered order, the nuns rarely leave the grounds unless to see the dentist or teach catechism. They work at making hand-stitched vestments and spend many hours in the small chapel.

Of the 13 sisters in the order, two are Americans, three Dutch, one German, two Belgian, two English and three Italian.

The principal work of the Religious and Perpetual Adoration is promotion of the Eucharistic cult and working for poor churches. A special display of hundreds of priests' vestments, stoles, altar lines, which have been made by the sisters, will be shown from 10:30 a. m. to 6:30 p. m. today.

Bookkeeper Indicted for Embezzlement

Richardson Accused Of Padding Union's Payroll for $37,800

Richard G. Richardson, 27, of 9 Fort Hunt rd., Alexandria, yesterday was indicted in connection with the embezzlement of $37,800 from the International Association of Machinists here.

Richards, who was bookkeeper for the labor union, was accused of taking sums ranging from $200 to $2700 weekly during the past three years.

The indictment was returned after union authorities estimated that Richardson had taken $215,000 by padding weekly payrolls for the union. Richardson has admitted taking $90,000, according to police.

He used the money, he said, to pay gambling debts and to furnish his lavish home. He had two automobiles, including a $4300 Cadillac, while working as a $65 a week bookkeeper, it was said.

According to police, he managed to get away with the weekly mulctings by manipulating payroll tapes. Richardson was in charge of bringing the money from the bank each week for the payroll.

The Richardson case was among 20 indictments returned by the District grand jury.

In another case, Joseph B. Powell, 39, a meat dealer, of 1214 Clement pl., Silver Spring, Md., was charged with writing checks for more than $1600 when he had but $25.30 in the bank. According to the indictment, he handed over checks to cover purchases of meat from Sam Mirman, Inc.

Mrs. Pearlie Mae Hill, 38, of 1534½ Marion st. nw., was charged with mayhem and deadly assault in allegedly destroying the sight of the left eye of Albert G. White of the same address. According to the indictment, Mrs. Hill used a lye and water solution.

Mayhew Offers Safety Rules for Fire Prevention

Fire Chief J. A. Mayhew yesterday offered District residents four safety suggestions, as Washington and the Nation began observance of Fire Prevention Week.

1. Gasoline should never be used for cleaning purposes.

2. Remove all accumulation of rubbish, old furniture, mattresses and the like from attics, closets and basements. "Even though a fire may not start from these sources, it will greatly add to the intensity of the fire," he said.

3. Never smoke in bed. Have plenty of ash trays in every room, and keep matches in safe locations, out of reach of small children.

4. Use metal containers with metal covers for ashes and trash.

The District Fire Prevention Council announced yesterday that it is sponsoring a parade along Pennsylvania ave. at 11:30 a. m. Saturday to climax the observance of Fire Prevention Week.

$50,000 Fund Drive Started For Cathedral

The Washington Cathedral's month-long campaign to raise $50,000 locally started at a luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel.

The drive now being waged is to raise funds for continued construction and maintenance at the cathedral.

More than 200 campaign workers at the hotel heard the Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, invite participation "in sharing to make Washington Cathedral live and grow."

Benjamin W. Thoron, treasurer and business manager of the cathedral, said that what is done to the cathedral next year "depends on what can be brought in during this year's campaign."

On a Nation-wide basis the Cathedral fund campaign also begins at this time, but will be conducted over a longer period, for a total goal of $500,000. Of this, $400,000 is assigned to building continuation, and $100,000 to sustaining. The local quota calls for $35,000 for sustaining, and $15,000 for building needs.

A. Lloyd Symington, general campaign chairman, who also headed last year's successful drive, presided.

Polio hit twice within two days for a family living in the 1200 block of Eaton rd. se., the District Health Department said. A 13-year-old boy went to Gallinger Hospital last Friday and his 12-year-old sister entered the same hospital Sunday, also a polio victim. Neighbors said there are two other children in the family.

A 16-year-old girl of the 6300 block of Taylor rd., Riverdale, Md., became the sixty-first polio victim of the year in Prince Georges County. Health officials did not indicate where she is hopspitalized.

Helicopter Used Hunting Drowned Girl

Aided by a Marine helicopter, rescue workers yesterday again searched fruitlessly for the body of a 13-year-old girl who drowned at Great Falls Saturday.

Maj. James Percy, USMC, and Detective Sergt. Frank Griffs, Montgomery County policeman, rode in a helicopter furnished by the Quantico Marine Base over the area where the girl was last seen.

They checked jagged rocks and eddies of the Potomac River but found no trace of Roberta Gilbert, daughter of a Metropolitan Police Department private.

Montgomery County police have asked fishermen below that point of the river to watch for the child's body. They said last night they will continue to check river eddies today.

Pvt. W. K. Gilbert, father of the girl, was at Great Falls yesterday as the search continued.

Streamlined D. C. Rule Is Sought by Trade Board

Reorganization Plan Chief Among Eleven Objectives Outlined In Group's Program

Plans are being made by the Washington Board of Trade to draft proposed legislation for reorganization of the District of Columbia government on a more "streamlined basis."

This was announced yesterday as Thornton W. Owen, president, outlined 11 objectives on which the trade board will place its "principal emphasis."

The board said it considers it "possible" the Eighty-first Congress may pass the Kefauver home rule bill, but that similar home rule legislation undoubtedly will be introduced next year, if the Kefauver bill is not passed.

"The Board of Trade has opposed enactment of bills which would provide local self-government where it was apparent more effective municipal operation would not result," Owen said.

Individual Merits

The Board will "continue to judge each proposed home-rule bill on its individual merits and prosecute an intensive campaign aimed at amending the Constitution of the United States to secure national representation for citizens of the District of Columbia."

The Board wants to minimize decentralization, "which would injure the city's downtown business district" and is studying government plans to move some agencies out of the city.

It also is dickering with George Washington University to have its graduate students prepare basic marketing data analyses for businessmen's use. These analyses, it was indicted, also would be used to determine whether the downtown area is losing its "business appeal."

Owen said the group is getting ready to make studies of D. C. operating costs to prevent "unwarranted expansion" of municipal services or "unwise expenditure" of municipal funds.

Better Team-work

The Board, seeking better teamwork between Washington and its metropolitan area in solving mutual problems, is studying establishment of a metropolitan area airport authority and an overall metropolitan area authority.

Owen said the Board is going to review zoning regulations in Washington to see if they cannot be made more flexible.

The Board promised continued cooperation with Congress and will give a welcoming dinner for new Congressmen on January 4. Establishment of a Municipal Research and Tax Department to aid the business community and continuation of its tourist and convention promotion, barring "major changes in the world situation," are also planned.

'Opportunity Program'

Owen announced an "American Opportunity Program" to combat ignorance about the Nation's economic system. The Board wants to increase its service to domestic and foreign businessmen in Washington.

It expects increased competition this year for certificates of merit awarded through its Architecture and Architectural Awards Committee.

It also is undertaking comprehensive studies of air transportaton schedules in view of the approval of an alternate airport for the area. In this connection it is making a survey to determine adequacy of landing fields and other facilities for private pilots in the area.

Alexandria Chief Suspends Policeman in 2 Traffic Cases

Alexandria Police Pvt. Earl M. Saunders, 22, was suspended yesterday as the result of two traffic complaints against him early Sunday.

Maj. Edgar Sims, superintendent of police, said he suspended Saunders after the policeman pleaded guilty at a hearing before Sims to two counts of reckless driving, one brought by a Virginia State trooper and the other by an Alexandria police sergeant. The two offenses occurred about two hours apart, Sims said.

Sims said Saunders was arrested by State Trooper W. C. Moncure about 4:45 a. m. Sunday after his car overturned on the Shirley hwy. near Woodbridge, injuring two occupants. He was charged with reckless driving and released on summons for a Fairfax Trial Justice Court hearing at an unspecified date.

About two hours before the accident, Sims said, Saunders was stopped in the 1400 block of King st. by Sergt. Claude M. Nixon, who said he had followed Saunders at speeds ranging from 70 to 75 miles an hour and had observed him pass a red light. The sergeant reported the incident to the police chief, Sims said.

In the Shirley hwy. accident, Saunders' car skidded 126 feet before overturning, Trooper Moncure reported to Sims.

Sims said he would make no final disposition of Saunders' case until after his hearing at Fairfax.

Saunders, who lives at 102 N. Pitt st., has been on the Alexandria force about 18 months.

Police Press Search For Leake Slayer

In Pasadena

George Peck Dead; Was Lawyer Here

Word was received in Washington yesterday of the death last Wednesday in Pasadena, Calif., of George Curtis Peck, former attorney for the House Military Affairs Committee.

Mr. Peck ended a District residency of 40 years when he moved to California six months ago. His wife, Mrs. Harriet E. Peck, died here last January.

As a youth he served in the Army in the Philippines, did newspaper work along the China coast, was a male nurse in Hongkong, hunted pirates on the Pearl River, explored in Borneo and Australia, ran guns in China.

Mr. Peck, a native of Auburn, N. Y., was a Commercial Attache in Panama, Mexico and Guatemala from 1926 through 1933. From then until 1937 he occupied a post with the Inter-American Highway Project in Costa Rica. He later worked here for the United States Maritime Commission, the Office of Censorship, and in 1943 he was appointed counsel to the House Military Affairs Committee.

Police pressed their search yesterday for an unidentified man who struck and fatally injured David Leake, 50, of 477 Casey ct. sw., late Friday night during an argument at the 4th. st. entrance to Casey ct.

Leake died Sunday at Gallinger Hospital. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said an autopsy showed death resulted from a fractured skull. Numerous bruises about the face and body attested to the fact that Leake had been severely beaten, the coroner said.

Meanwhile, Dr. MacDonald's office scheduled inquests into two homicides for today at the District Morgue.

The first inquest, at 11:30 a. m., will be into the death of Angelo Trice, 33, of 45 Ivy st. se., who was stabbed during an argument, September 15, and died last Wednesday in Providence Hospital. After the stabbing, police arrested Eddie Gray, 45, also of the Ivy st. address, and charged him with assault with a dangerous weapon.

At noon a coroner's jury will consider the death of John Edelin, 25, of 3715 9th st. nw., who was shot to death early Saturday during an argument outside the Melody Inn, 1122 Bladensburg rd. ne.

Charged with the murder is Thomas Tribble, 28, of 42 G st. sw., a drummer at the Melody Inn. After the shooting, Tribble fled from pursuers and ran through a plate-glass window, police reported.

'Nick' Manthos, Friend of All At Judiciary Square, Dies at 67

Everybody around Courthouse Square knew "Nick" Manthos.

The figure of the slight, white-haired Greek with his shoe-shine equipment was as familiar as the Lincoln Statue to those who worked in the Municipal Center or in the District Courthouse across the street.

Yesterday many of them learned with more than a tinge of sadness that Nick won't be back. He died of a heart attack at his home, 917 D st. nw., at about 9 a. m.

Nick—who had shined the shoes of every chief of police for years, who always got a friendly nod from judges, lawyers, policemen—never let his patrons forget, either, that he was the father of seven sons—and that six of them fought in World War II.

While the war was on, Nick would go to the press room at the new municipal center regularly and ask reporters there to read his letters from his sons.

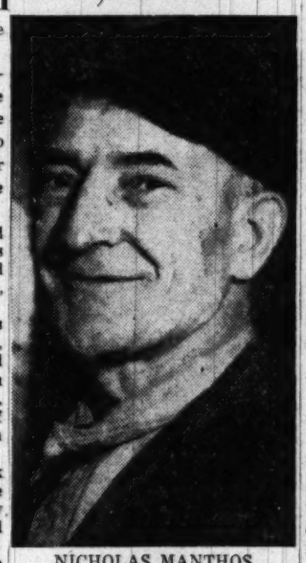

Then he would get Lieut. Hoyle Secrest, secretary to the chief of the Detective Bureau, to take down his dictated answers on the typewriter.

Manthos gave each of his sons the middle name of Nicholas. He said he didn't know what else he would be able to leave them, and wanted to be sure they had his name.

Manthos came to America about the turn of the century on money borrowed from a Washington restaurateur. He worked here in that restaurant for a year to repay the debt, later met and married his wife, Antonia, also Greek.

He lost his money in the 1929 crash, got a job as cook at St. Elizabeths Hospital, and combined that with his shoe shine business, which he was still conducting at the time of his death.

Besides his wife, he is survived by his eight children. They are James, 33, who was a combat photographer in the army and is now a veterinarian technician; Mike, 31, who served as a corporal in the First Marine Division and is now an engineer working for a Government airport in Iceland; John, 30, a private contracting engineer since his discharge as a sergeant in the First Marine Division; Mrs. Angelina O'Donnell; Pete, 28, formerly a petty officer in the Navy submarine service and now a student at American University; George, 26, an ex-petty officer in the Navy, now manager of a Virginia Beach business; Frank, 24, a former seaman in the submarine service who has become known as the police department's "one man vice squad," and Thomas, 21, an employe of the American Federation of Labor.

O. J. Henning, D.C. Policeman 28 Years, Dies

Metropolitan Police Pvt. Oren J. Henning, 56, a veteran of 28 years on the force, died Sunday at Mt. Alto Hospital of a liver ailment.

Pvt. Henning

Pvt. Henning, who lived at 1331 K st. se., lost his wife last March under tragic circumstances, when a 5-year-old boy visiting the couple accidentally shot her with her husband's service revolver.

The child was one of triplets brought to the Henning home by their father for a Sunday morning visit at the request of Mrs. Henning.

Pvt. Henning had been a patient at the hospital from May until about a month ago, when he returned to his duties in the central communications and records bureau. He became ill again last Saturday and returned to the hospital.

He joined the forces in May, 1922, and received three commendations. Before being transferred to the communications post last October, he was in charge of the patrol box system in the Fifth Precinct. He had previously served in the Ninth, Second, 13th, Fourth and Sixth precincts.

A native of Michigan, Private Henning spent most of his youth in Detroit. He joined the Marine Corps during World War I at the age of 17 and served four years.

He was a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion.

He is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Myrtle Engel, of Detroit and Mrs. Edith Johnson of Montague, Mich., and two brothers, Norman and Henry, both of Detroit.

Mrs. Poythress, who worked as a clerk at the Bureau of Internal Revenue, died Saturday in her home at 1229 N. Glebe rd., Arlington.

Debate Campaign Issues

Democratic, GOP Women Clash

By Norma Lanum

THE WOMEN'S NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC CLUB and the D. C. League of Republican Women, who customarily meet separately for their weekly Monday luncheons, met together yesterday with a resounding clash.

The occasion was a luncheon and debate on political campaign issues sponsored by the two clubs at the Wardman Park Hotel. During the course of the program each political party was accused of starting the war in Korea, preventing civil rights legislation, hampering a bipartisan foreign policy and generally making this country an uncomfortable place to live in.

The debaters were Mrs. India Edwards, vice chairman and executive director of the Women's Division of the Democratic National Committee, Miss Bertha Adkins, executive director of the Women's Division of the Republican National Committee, Charles Van Devander, publicity director of the Democratic National Committee, and Albert B. Hermann, executive director of the Republican committee.

TO BEGIN WITH Miss Adkins said Administration blunders caused the present war.

"The whole situation was set up so North Korea could move right in," she claimed. The Democrats' "failure to understand the Far East" led to the war, she said. Also, they "grossly neglected" our national defense.

Then sharp-tongued India Edwards struck in: "The Republicans' determination to keep Korea in the November campaign will be the biggest boomerang they ever threw."

Mrs. Edwards went on to rebuke the opposition party for blocking an adequate defense program. At least half the Republicans opposed Selective Service at every vote before the Korean attack, she said.

MISS ADKINS, AGAIN: Why did President Truman order Louis Johnson to cut the Air Force from the authorized 70 groups down to 40 groups, she demanded. And why was construction of the flush deck carrier, also authorized by Congress, halted by the Administration, she wanted to know.

No answer . . . Mrs. Edwards turned instead to the Marshall Plan. The Democrats voted for it, five to one, she said . . .

Miss Adkins, a soft spoken little woman in a pink checked suit, also accused the Munitions Board of failing to adjust to the current emergency.

The board has failed to build up adequate stockpiles of strategic supplies, especially rubber and aluminum, she declared.

THEN THE MEN TOOK OVER. Mr. Hermann wanted to know if the Democrats planned to continue using civil rights as a campaign issue. He maintained that the Republicans have a better record on the issue than the Democrats.

Mr. Van Devander retorted that the Republicans weren't voting for civil rights because they believed in them. They just did it to block FEPC legislation, he claimed.

Mrs. Edwards piped in: The Democrats who vote against civil rights are the Southern Democrats who campaigned against the issue. "At least they're honest!"

The program ended on a note of total discord. Next Monday the two political clubs will resume their policy of meeting separately for their weekly luncheons.

The Lady Says No!

They say she is, they say she isn't.

The very best authority—the lady herself, Perle Mesta, American Minister to Luxembourg, says she isn't.

Mme. Minister says she won't be in the first night audience for "Call Me Madam" which opens Thursday in New York. Perhaps, before she returns to Luxembourg, Mrs. Mesta will see the show, but at the moment she has made no plans, she said.

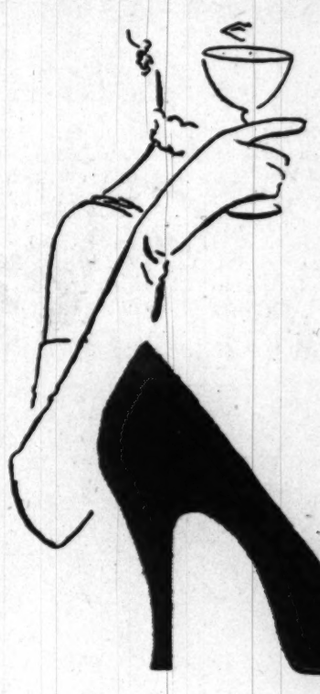

Other than spending long hours at her desk in the State Department, Mme. Minister has made few plans. On Saturday, however, she'll greet a young man from Luxembourg—Peter Rieff, who's coming to this country on a scholarship to study at Purdue. One of six children, Peter was selected by a committee as the first scholar on the newly founded American-Luxembourg Scholarship. It was Mrs. Mesta who chose the scholarship committee—one member from each political party and headed by the Minister of Culture. Peter will be Mrs. Mesta's guest at the Sulgrave Club and she'll devote Saturday and Sunday to him, taking him to visit the historic spots in and around Washington and showing him how the wheels of Government turn.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman Divorced Husband Last Year, Then Realized She Loved Him More Than Ever; Army Has Him Now; If She Waits, Is There Hope of Reunion, She Asks

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 35, have a son aged 7, and I divorced my husband a year ago. The problem is that I realize now that I love him more than ever, and to complicate matters, he left today with the Army. He was a member of the National Guard and his unit was activated.

We were married in 1942, after six years' acquaintance, having met in college. When we'd been married a year he went overseas in World War II, leaving the week our son was born. He was gone three years and on his return it seemed we just couldn't get adjusted. Tom was very nervous from his war experiences and I was equally nervous from a thyroid condition (more recently cured) that dated from the baby's birth.

Tom was brutal on a few occasions, and for this cause I got the divorce last September, four years after he came home. He didn't want the divorce but he didn't contest it. After the divorce I moved to another city temporarily, returning here last spring. In the interim he came to see our son and I realized how much I cared for him.

Tom says he still loves me but he was shaken by the divorce. He says if he can regain confidence in my love, he will be ready to marry me again; but he almost went crazy after the divorce and fears he would lose his mind if we ever went through that again. I would have married him before he left today, but he put me off. We agreed to write and we "may" marry on his return; but there is nothing definite between us.

I've done a lot of thinking since the divorce and I tell Tom I realize my own mistakes—one of which was nagging too much about money,—and that I'd do my best to succeed next time. But of course I realize it takes two to make a good marriage. Inasmuch as I love him wholeheartedly, should I wait indefinitely to see what develops? Or should I marry someone else if opportunity offers? I don't feel I could be happy with anyone else, but I am not getting any younger and I am trying to think realistically. I need your advice, for I am worried, unhappy and don't know what course to take. V. P.

DEAR V. P.: We all recognize that soldiers are facing grim business nowadays. But even so I get the impression, from your long letter here cut in half, that Tom is vaguely relieved at being sent back to military service.

I think he embraced the call to colors as a supposed escape from the problem of conscience and economics that you pose with your harried suit for love and protection. And doubtless also he hails Army duty as a recess of sorts from his general maladjustment to civilian life, with its relentless challenge to think for oneself, scramble for money, take care of dependents, etc., as the standard price of being respected and self respecting in the role of private citizen.

You say that Tom didn't want the divorce but didn't contest it. I believe you are telling a half-truth and deluding yourself with wishful thinking. Actions speak louder than words, and Tom's performance implies that he wanted the divorce very much, that he resented monogamy and domestic fetters, and was fighting indirectly for release during all the years you were trying to hang on, after his return from World War II. You have flashes of awareness on this point, as revealed in your wistful statement, "I realize it takes two to make a good marriage." But you've felt too frightened and forlorn to look facts in the face in search of their meaning.

In all probability Tom's conscience fought his purpose all along, in a blind unconscious struggle that may have kept him confused about his intentions. Then when he found himself finally "free," with his treacherous cause achieved, he suffered the usual torments of a weakling engulfed in guilty remorse about shabby behavior.

In short, he was punishing himself, in neurotic atonement for a dirty deed, not suffering from a broken heart or shattered faith in you in his "darkest hour" after divorce. He knew, if you did not, that he'd forced your hand and won his aim,—so you shouldn't take his "high tragedy" tone too seriously. It is a diplomatic line intended to put you in wrong and keep himself in the clear.

While you count on Tom, you will always be out on a limb. So close the book on yesterday, and make it your purpose to mend your life without help from him. As for your theory that you love him more than ever, it is pure delusion, born of loneliness and urgent desire to find sanctuary in some man's personality; and at this time you can't muster any potential but him. If and when you have the good fortune to discover fond companionship with a reliable suitor, Tom will be a fading memory. M. H.

Experiment Edna

Arms and Thighs Can Be Trimmed

Third day of Edna's 14-day beauty program

By Ann Lawrence

"MY UPPER ARM SEEMS so flabby," Edna declared, "several inches larger than it should be. But the rest of me is not bad at all, even if it doesn't seem quite modest to say so. Is there any exercise to slenderize this one annoying part?"

Of course there is. But it is most unusual to have fleshy upper arms and not to find excess flesh on other parts of the body. In Edna's case, it was the beginning of a roll around her waist, which she learned to correct yesterday with good posture and an easy exercise. And it was also too-heavy thighs. They, too, were quite out of bounds with the rest of her figure.

And so, to her daily exercise routine, three more gymnastics were added.

TO REDUCE THE UPPER ARMS: Raise your arms shoulder high, extending them straight out to the sides, palms down. Now, keeping your arm stiff, rotate the whole arm in a circular motion, describing an arc of about 5 or 6 inches. Repeat 20 times daily with each arm.

Exercise 2: Sit or stand with your arms out to the side, shoulder high. Bend your hands sharply at your wrist, with your palms and fingers pointing backward. Now move your arms forward, with resistance, your wrists leading. Try to resist the forward pull, but keep pulling until your wrists touch. Repeat 10 times daily.

TO FLATTEN BULGY THIGHS and at the same time keep your hips under control: Kneel on the floor and stretch your arms over your head. Try to stretch your body upward at the same time. Keep arms in this position throughout the exercise. Bend the body to the right side, pushing the hips out to the left side and lower them to the mat, or as far as possible. Return to the first position and bend to the left side. Repeat, alternating each time. Repeat three times, then rest and repeat nine times altogether.

ADVERTISING OPPORTUNITY
Here's a chance for a college graduate to get a foothold on the advertising ladder. To start, it's only a messenger's job at $30 a week. Within a few months, the next step will be calling on the retail trade, doing merchandising. After that—probably advertising salesman, but maybe research or production or copy, depending on the man. This is really a good opportunity and we want to give it to the right man. Since it's primarily a stepping stone to selling advertising, don't apply unless you have a sales personality. If in doubt, you haven't.

The Canadian newspapers and stockbroker bulletins, which could e nothing but "disturbing nonsense" in this department's news that the Canadian Dollar was on its way up), must have had some mbarrassing moments the other weekend following the broadcast that report . . . Things To Keep You Up Nights: The Allied High Commission Germany has permitted the creation of a new German Federal oreign Service . . . Of the 22 leading officials—at least 16 formerly elonged to the Nazi Party . . . Of the 11 liaison officials of the Ade- auer Government and the Allied Commission—8 were Nazis . . . On May 8th, 1950, the Allies announced they had relaxed con- rols on German industries and explained that they were confident the Germans will not use their industrial strength again to rearm."

The Nazi plot to rearm was hatched as long ago as 1944. During hat year Allied Intelligence was given a complete report detailing he secret meeting of German industrialists—which included the rep- esentatives of Krupp and Messerschmitt. They shifted huge sums o Swiss banks to finance research for new weapons in so-called eutral nations . . . The blueprint drawn up during this gathering f Nazi moneybags included the following: "We recognize that cer- ain of the best known Nazi leaders will be condemned as war crim- nals. But industrialists must find safe places in research bureaus or less conspicuous but more important members."

While you read this, Nazi researchers are at work in Spain and Argentina—and that includes atomic scientists.

Reminder: In 1941 Franco was quoted offering Americans this ompliment: "What a joy to see the German bombers one day pun- shing the insolence of the New York skyscrapers!"

It is 38 years since Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, was slain n W. 43d St. in the police scandals of that time . . . But Jos. A. Editors Told U. S. Opposes Any Press Gag

NEW YORK, Oct. 9 (AP).—Assistant Secretary of State Edward G. Miller, jr., tonight declared the United States Government is opposed to suggestions it prevent the American press from publishing reports considered offensive abroad.

Miller told the Inter-American Press Conferenc ein a prepared speech that the press can best promote good relations among nations by seeking the truth and reporting all available facts as objectively as possible.

The conference, which first met at Havana in 1942, is made up of representatives from the United States, Canadian and Latin American press.

Earlier today it approved a constitution setting up an Inter-American Press Association, dedicated to guarding the interests and freedom of the Western Hemisphere press.

In his speech Miller was obviously referring to informal Latin American complaints made to the State Department from time to time in the past against reports in United States newspapers and publications considered offensive.

Miller declared the balance between responsibility and freedom in the press requires constant adjustment and cannot be fixed by legislation or governmental intervention. Main stabilizing factors, he said, are competition and voluntary codes of ethics.

[The United Press reported from Lima that Genaro Carnero Checa, editor of the weekly news magazine 1950 and retiring president of the Peruvian Association of Newspapermen, was denied a United States visa to attend the Inter-American Press Conference on grounds of being a former Communist.]

Denise Darcel, Crosby Get License to Wed

Crosby gave his occupation as a builder, and his address as Chevy Chase, Md.

You Got to Be Hep

Billy Rose Simply Deplores Innocence

By John Crosby

"THE BILLY ROSE SHOW" should come as no surprise to anyone who has ever read the Billy Rose column, which must comprise most of the literate population of the earth. The Rose show is a television dramatization of some of the stories that have appeared in his column. Most, but not all of them center around Broadway; they are peopled by very tough and—I can't sem to avoid the word—hep characters; and invariably, while Rose rather deplores innocence, it triumphs in the end over the guilty, usually through the intervention of fate which takes a pretty strong hand in many of the stories.

Crosby

They're prety good stories, though, and Rose is seeing to it that they are shown off at their best. He has enlisted the services as producer of Jed Harris, the former boy wonder, who is certainly the best man around to get the most out of the Rose yarns. "There'll be nothing spectacular," declared Rose on his opening show. "No showgirls and none of the razzmatazz and hoopla I've been mixed up with for the last 25 years. I'm not interested in six-inch elephants or inch and a half chorus girls. They're just little stories."

FOR A 16-INCH medium, that's a wise decision. The first little story, called "The Night They Made A Bum Out of Helen Hayes"—a typical Rose title in that it probably startled a lot of people into looking at a story that had nothing to do with Helen Hayes—was about a poker game, more specifically about a single $23,000 pot. The chump in the story managed to outwit—or seemingly outwit—the hep character for the pot. But, as usual, there was the twist. Rose recognizing that chumps had best not tangle with hep characters very often if they value their skins.

It was, as Rose promised, a little story, hardly more than an anecdote, and very well suited to half an hour on television. The Harris production, completely in harmony with the littleness of the story, was one of extreme intimacy with small telling close-ups of hands and faces and cards and money—the television equivalent of the sharp, significant phrase in a short story. It also contained a vivid performance by a remarkably powerful actor named Murvyn Vye.

ROSE appears both at the beginning of his little stories and at the end, seated at a table at Lindy's. (I rather wish he'd pick another spot. Lindy's belongs pretty thoroughly to the late Damon Runyon.)

One last note concerning another of Rose's far-flung activities. "The Canary Pet Show," a 15-minute program of songs warbled by the Master Radio Canaries, returned to WOR for its fifteenth season the other day. One of the songs they warbled on the opening program was "I Wanna Be Loved" which was written by Rose and contains one of the most passionate lyrics to be heard on the local jukeboxes. Frankly, Mr. R., I don't think that lyric—("I wanna be loved to desperation . . .")—is a fit thing for decent young canaries to be singing. I'm going to complain to the A. S. P. C. A.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

Since you bought a television receiver and became a TV fan, I was hoping that you'd say something about the technical shortcomings of the recent World Series coverage. But you haven't, so I will.

In the very first game the broadcast had hardly begun before the picture blacked out, and for several innings we got nothing but a voice description of what was going on.

Then the sound went bad and some brilliant vice president decided that we had to have a musical background to the picture. Perhaps he was under the impression that a brass band plays accompaniment throughout major league contests.

And when the teams moved to New York, the camera crews behaved as if they'd never covered a baseball game before. The cameras seldom followed the ball properly, and very often focused on a fielder running over to back up a play rather than on the man who was actually making the catch.

I make no comment about the announcers, who talked entirely too much, because announcers have been criticized for this fault ever since television was born and it has done no good.

Eventually, I suppose, a new generation of baseball fans will develop. When they go out to Griffith Stadium they'll be unable to follow the game unless an announcer on the public address system keeps them posted with such inside dope as: "Jones stands 6 feet 2, weighs 195 pounds, and was born in Bad Breath, Idaho."

Name Withheld.

Dear Sir:

It's too bad, of course, that television has not yet been technically perfected, and that some place between Philadelphia and Washington the picture got lost. Local stations were not to blame.

I was watching WTOP-TV when the sound conked out, and immediately checked the other stations to find out whether the trouble was local or originated with the networks. But when I found WNBW playing a musical background, I scurried back to Channel 9. Why a few minutes of silence is such a bad thing—whether on television or in the movies—is something I have never been able to understand.

The camera work from New York was unquestionably poor. Our own WTTG, with no elaborate special setups, follows the play in much better fashion.

As for the announcers, I have no sympathy for you. You needn't have suffered so.

The lady at our house was taking a nap Saturday afternoon when the final game started, so I turned on the picture but not the sound—and enjoyed every minute of the contest.

Bill.

ONE-TRACK MIND

Mrs. James D. Redding of 827 Rose la., Falls Church, Va., is just back from attending a meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Club in New Rochelle, N. Y., and brings a story with her.

New Rochelle's new law requiring Communists to register brought a 60-year-old applicant into the police station the other day.

"What subversive organizations are you a member of?" asked the cop on duty.

"Who, me?" asked the startled citizen. "I'm not a member of any subversive organizations."

"Then what are you doing here?" asked the policeman.

"It said in the paper that all commuters have to register in New Rochelle," snapped the irate citizen, "and I'm a commuter."

'TWAS EVER THUS

Mary Ellen wonders why it is that the kids that are under foot yammering for something to eat all afternoon are never to be found when dinner is finally ready.

THIS IS WASHINGTON

Gene Klaven, WTOP's late-night madman, tells me that a friend of his who works in a large local office is currently wishing that a good, sturdy mule would kick him in the pants.

When the guy started in his present job some years ago, his predecessor showed him how to fill out a daily report that absolutely had to be left in duplicate in the supervisor's office each evening.

For almost six years he religiously spent 20 to 30 minutes a day making out the report. But the other night he completely forgot about it until he was at home and ready to go to bed.

For a while he debated the advisability of immediate suicide, and despite the fact that his wife talked him out of it, he spent a sleepless night. First thing the next morning he rushed down to the office and made out the report.

Apologetically, he sought audience with the head man. "I'm sorry this wasn't turned in yesterday afternoon," he said, "It escaped my mind. I do hope I haven't caused you a great deal of inconvenience."

The boss glanced at the report and said, "That's all right, Jones, we all make mistakes at times."

Visibly heartened, our hero was about to withdraw when the boss added, in afterthought:

"By the way, Jones, I've meant to ask you for some time—and I guess this is as good a time as any—what are we supposed to do with these reports of yours? We've just been filing one copy and throwing the other away."

VAGRANT THOUGHT

Maybe the Redskins ought to try their hand at baseball and the Nats ought to switch to football for a while.

Background of Mysterious Mafia

By Drew Pearson

(Editor's note — The Senate Crime Committee has given numerous hints that American crime was dominated by the Mafia. Following up these hints, Drew Pearson has dug into this mysterious organiation and in this and other columns will bring to light the names of the Mafia leaders who rule the criminal world of the United States).

A total of 50 men control most of the big rackets in the United States. All are members of the mysterious Mafia, and all but one are either Italian-born or of Italo-America n descent.

Pearson

Various statements have been given by the Kefauver crime committee regarding the power of the Mafia, but few people realize its tremendous power or that its head, Lucky Luciano, directs its affairs from Italy, whither he was deported when Governor Dewey, for some strange reason, released him from Sing Sing during the war.

The history of these strange underground rulers goes back to the eighteenth century when the Mafia was organized in Sicily to oppose the tyranny of the Bourbons.

A similar secret society, called the Camorra, mushroomed in Naples for the same purpose, and expatriates from both emigrated to America. They reorganized, principally in New York, but spread out across the country, at first preying chiefly upon wealthy Italians. The Camorra became known as the "Black Hand" and the Mafia continued under its Sicilian name. Eventually the two organizations became identical.

Because the Mafia started out bootlegging and graduated to dope-smuggling, the United States Narcotics Bureau has kept a close watch on it, and has circulated among narcotics agents the following confidential instruction:

"Because of our belief that members of the Mafia constitute the most important and most dangerous group engaged in the traffic of drugs, it is deemed essential that every narcotics agent be fully informed concerning this underworld organization."

According to this confidential narcotics bureau report, Mafia members at first "lived according to the old traditions, and if they killed from time to time, it was to punish a member who had done something radically wrong or to avenge a nonforgivable offense to a member. Pimps were looked upon with contempt and could not aspire to enter the ranks of the Mafia . . . This shows how the association has degenerated (inasmuch as Lucky Luciano was king of the pimps and a prominent member of the Mafia in New York) . . ."

Mafia Civil War

"The organization was originally for Sicilians exclusively, because the Sicilians were men of proven and proverbial secrecy and they were afraid to trust their secrets to men who talked too much . . . This rule is no longer complied with strictly and Americans born of Sicilian extraction and even others are admitted.

"With the advent of prohibition the Mafia woke up to the realization that there was money to be made easily . . . Those members prospered financially by leaps and bounds. The undreamed of sudden wealth went to their heads and they became rather snobbish, independent and reactionary and did not live strictly within the dictates of the association. Men with wives and children took to running around with blonde concubines; promiscuous drinking was indulged in, with frequent drunkenness; which was alarming because members of the Mafia are not allowed to get drunk lest they become too loquacious and talk.

"Then, again, those who weren't making easy money became jealous of those who did and a serious rift took place. It lasted some two years, during which many killings were perpetrated—brother plotting against brother, dollars supplanting the original brotherly love. Finally, pacification was brought about.

"From that time, the Mafia has cornered every racket promising easy money — narcotics, pinball machines, slot machines, prostitution, gambling of every form and description.

"The Mafia has also managed to monopolize many legitimate industries . . .

Buy Protection

"The association in this country has enough money to buy whatever political protection it needs, and many murders have gone unpunished merely because of the political pressure put in motion by money."

"Once a member, there is no alternative of withdrawing. The initiation fee is murder or some extreme act of violence such as dynamiting. On the other hand, the candidate is assured of immunity and some way of making money."

The Mafia does not appear to be a close-knit organization but rather a loose, fraternal society. Like a plate af spaghetti, the connections of the Mafia members are tangled and twined together. Lucky Luciano, the international head, still exercises a mysterious control over the American underworld from Italy.
